Speed Record Broken as House Passes Tax Bill

MEASURE IS SENT TO SENATE 9 DAYS AFTER GETTING IT

Few Democrats and Insurgent Republicans Make Feeble Effort To Stay Passage.

FEDERAL LEVIES ARE CUT $325,000,000

Several Amendments Defeated Advocating Changes in Measure as Prepared by Committee.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.
(United News Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, December 18.—Breaking all records for such legislation, the house passed the tax reduction bill Friday night, nine days after it began consideration of the measure. The bill, which cuts taxes $325,000,000, was approved finally almost in the form in which it came from the ways and means committee.

The final vote passing the bill was 390 to 25.

There was a holiday atmosphere in the house as the bill finished the stage of its journey. Republican Floor Leader Tilson of Connecticutt, congratulating the members "upon being permitted to play the role of Santa Claus."

Now Goes to Senate.

The measure now goes to the senate, but it will not be taken up there until after Christmas. The senate finance committee has been called to take up the bill January 2.

There was a final flare-up from some democrats and insurgent republicans who were dissatisfied with the bill. These forces registered their disapproval by voting to recommit the bill, a futile gesture.

The final day of consideration was marked by the introduction of a number of amendments but all of these were voted down except for those suggested by the ways and means committee. These amendments concerned the tax on commercial alcohol, which has been cut in half in the bill, and the board of tax appeals.

Republican leaders avoided a sharp fight on the board of tax appeals by striking out the provision giving members a life tenure of office which was opposed by democratic leaders and changing the term from four to fourteen years.

The bill, as passed, provides cuts all down the line. The normal rate provided in the bill is 1 1-2 per cent on the first $4,000 of income, 3 per cent on the next $4,000 and 5 per cent above. This compares with a present schedule of 2 per cent on the first $4,000, 4 per cent on the next $4,000 and 6 per cent on the remainder.

Exemptions were increased in the bill fom $1,000 for a single person and $2,500 for a married person to $1,500 and $3,500.

Surtax rates were slashed, the maximum being reduced from 40 per cent at $200,000 to 20 per cent at $100,000. The tax begins with 1 per cent above $10,000, and graduates.

Further benefit for the business man was provided by increasing the in-

The Eternal Triangle!

What shall she give him?

What shall he give her?

What, oh, what, shall they give each other for Christmas?

And yet, there is nothing simpler, really! The answers to each and every one of the three sides of that triangle are to be found today, and every day, until Christmas in the "Shop-O-Scope" columns of The Constitution's Classified Section.

Many Higher-Ups Are Found Guilty On Liquor Charges

1 KILLED, 1 DYING IN PISTOL DUEL AT HAWKINSVILLE

Bitter Feud of Year's Standing Flares as Two Principals Meet and "Shoot It Out."

Macon, Ga., December 18.—(AP)—Wiley Davis, 25, of Hawkinsville, G..., is at the point of death in a private hospital here, shot twice through the abdomen, and W. D. Gilder, 30, of Alma, Ga., is dead at Hawkinsville, as a result of a pistol duel fought in Sheehan's cafe in that city this afternoon.

According to a deputy sheriff who came here later with a warrant charging Davis with first degree murder, the shooting was a result of a feud.

A year ago Davis is said to have struck Gilder over the head with an iron bar, Gilder at that time, according to the officer, uttered threats that he would kill Davis on sight.

Gilder went to Hawkinsville this afternoon, the officer stated, hunting for Davis. They had not met for 12 months. Davis was located at the rear of the cafe and as they saw each other both drew their pistols and opened fire.

Gilder was shot three times, once through the side, once in the chest and once in the hip. He died almost instantly. But before he fell Gilder had wounded Davis twice. Both men emptied their pistols.

The shooting created much excitement in Hawkinville. Police officers and sheriff's deputies rushed to the scene as soon as the shooting began, but it was over when they arrived.

Sheriff P. K. Ridley ordered Davis removed to this city.

Gilder was married and the father of a seven-year-old boy. Davis is single.

LITTLE GIRL HURT BADLY BY AUTO

Laurie Mae Dailey Suffers Fractured Skull. Driver Sought by Police.

Laurie Mae Dailey, 6, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Dailey, of 641 Lee street, suffered a fractured skull, a broken right leg and possible internal injuries about 1 o'clock Friday afternoon when she was knocked down by an automobile driven by an unidentified white man at Lee street and Avon avenue, according to hospital attaches. She was carried to Grady hospital, where physicians said she is in a critical condition.

The girl was returning home from the Oakland City school when she was struck down. The car, a coupe, was driven, witnesses said, by a middle-aged white man, wearing a white and green striped sweater and blue trousers who stopped immediately, picked up the injured child and carried her to the principal of the school, according to police reports.

After leaving the victim in the hands of school officials the driver left the scene without revealing his identity. Police are investigating.

L. G. Henry, 22, of 36 Chappel street, was slightly injured Friday morning when he was struck by a truck on McDaniel street near Whitehall street, while examining the gas tank on his automobile, according to Grady hospital authorities, where he was carried immediately following the accident.

The truck which struck Henry was operated by a negro, who stopped and offered assistance and later drove off when Henry was placed in a car of a passing motorist. He was treated for minor bruises about the body and later allowed to go home.

J. A. Dodger, of 1 Alta place, was arrested on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, follow-

23 Men Are Convicted in Withdrawal of 30,000 Gallons of Whisky From Jack Daniel Distillery.

REMUS TESTIMONY LED TO CONVICTIONS

Five Prominent St. Louis Politicians Among List Convicted in Indianapolis Federal Court.

Indianapolis, December 18.—(AP)—Twenty-three men from St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago were found guilty in federal court here today of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition laws, in connection with withdrawal of 30,000 gallons of pre-war whisky from the Jack Daniel distillery at St. Louis. Twenty of the men are from St. Louis, where several of them are prominent in politics. Two are from Cincinnati and one from Chicago.

"We have never reached so many of the higher-ups," John Marshall, assistant attorney general, who directed the presentation of the case, said.

December 30 was set by Judge Robert C. Baltzell for passing sentence. A maximum sentence of two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $10,000 may be assessed.

List of Convicted Men.

Among those convicted were:

Arnold J. Hellmick, former collector of internal revenue; Nat Goldstein, republican leader and former clerk of the circuit court; State Senator Michael J. Kinney; Michael J. Whalen, former alderman, and William J. Kinney, deputy internal revenue collector of St. Louis.

The others were: Anthony Foley, Daniel O'Neill, Harry Levin, Morris, Isadore and Sidney Multin, John Connors, Edward J. O'Hare, Robert E. Walker, Richard, Fitzgibbons, Thomas F. McCafferty, Edward Meininger, Harry Stratton, Ben Doncaster and John Marcus, all of St. Louis; William Lucking and George R. Landon, Cincinnati, and Don H. Robinson, Chicago.

Ffed Essen, a former Missouri congressman, accused of a part in the plot, was ill when the rtial opened. He is to be tried later. Three of the defendants, Carlisle and Clifford Sampson and Bernard Brink, of Cincinnati, pleaded guilty, and the government dismissed the charge against Mrs. Remus when Remus took the stand.

Remus said the liquor had been purchased with the idea of illegally withdrawing it. Through the influence of Essen, Goldstein, Kinney and several other politicians, the Remus ring obtained protection from the internal revenue office, Remus testified.

20 INDICTED AT CHICAGO FOR LIQUOR VIOLATIONS.

Chicago, December 18.—(AP)—Twenty indictments, charging violations of the national prohibition laws, were returned by the federal grand jury here late today. The Erie railroad and 10 persons were named, and tonight Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe caused a summons to be issued for F. G. Robbins, its vice president.

In the second group, Major Percy Owens, former Illinois prohibition director, and eight others are charged

Author Builds Statue To Eve In Front Yard

Robert Quillen, Humorist, Defends Action Before Horrified Neighbors.

Greenville, S. C., December 18.—(Special.)—Robert Quillen, nationally-known humorist and author, has erected a monument in his front yard to Eve, the first woman, and his townspeople are horrified.

In an editorial in his own paper, answering the criticism of the neighbors, he said: "Eve was a distant relative of mine, on my mother's side. The family has always been proud of her. She was the first lady of the land, and the reigning beauty of her time."

Beneath the inscription, "In Memory of Eve, the First Woman," is a nicely-carved apple, with a twig and one leaf.

BORAH LAUNCHES ATTACK ON ENTRY INTO WORLD COURT

Three Reservations Proposed as Safeguard by Idaho Solon as Debate Waxes Hot in Senate.

WALSH, LENROOT ALSO TAKE FLOOR

Borah Defies Republicans Who Favor Court Because Issue Is Plank in Party Platform.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, December 18.—Signs of rising blood pressure appeared in the senate on the second day of the world court fight.

Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, opened a severe attack on the project and proposed three draft reservations to protect the Monroe doctrine, to prevent use of economic or military pressure to enforce the court's awards, and to prevent extension of the tribunal's authority.

Lenroot and Walsh Speak.

Two speeches were made in favor of the court, one by Lenroot, of Wisconsin, a republican, and the other by Walsh, of Montana, a democrat, the man who conducted the Teapot Dome inquiry. Both spoke with considerable restraint and rested on logic rather than indignation. Borah showed more heat. Because of his dual position as head of the foreign relations committee and leader of the fight against the administration's foremost foreign policy, his speech was followed closely by a well-filled senate and a crowded gallery.

In closing, Borah threw this hand grenade at those who have twitted him because the republican party platform indorsed the court: "If there is a senator in this chamber who believes that American adherence to the court is injurious and detrimental to his government and votes for it simply because it is in his party's platform, he would be the slimiest creature that ever wriggled his way through the United States senate.

Not Bound by Platform.

"I have made my position plain. The platform doesn't have much to do with this situation, and I am not bound by the platform."

Borah did not pretend to deliver his full argument against entering the court. The attack Friday was merely his opening word. He will

U. S. JUDGE IS HELD GUILTY OF CRIMES

Special House Committee Returns Report Against Innocence of Eastern Illinois Judge.

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—A special house committee tonight adopted a report, declaring Federal Judge George W. English, of the eastern Illinois district, to be "guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors requiring interposition of the constitutional powers of the house."

The findings of the committee will be presented to the house tomorrow and then referred to its judiciary committee to determine whether impeachment proceedings shall be initiated against Judge English.

The committee report said:

"The special committee, in its opinion, based upon testimony and records, believes that the said George W. English has been found guilty of acts which, in its contemplation of the constitution, are high crimes and misdemeanors requiring the interposition of the constitutional powers of the house of representatives."

The report was concurred in by all members except Representative Weller, democrat, New York, who was absent. Representative Boies, republican, Iowa, who headed the committee, was directed to draft the report and it will be submitted to Mr. Weller for signature, if he desires to approve it before its presentation to the house.

NEW SALARY HIKE SCHEDULE URGED BY CITY EMPLOYEES

Proposed Plan Would Affect Only Employees Who Receive Less Than $200 Monthly.

EMPLOYEES' UNION TO SUPPORT MOVE

Ordinance To Carry Schedule Into Effect January 1 Will Be Offered Monday in Council

An entirely new salary schedule, affecting only city employees and officials making less than $200 a month, has been drafted by the salaries committee of City and County Public Service Employees union, and an ordinance to carry the provisions into effect January 1 will be introduced in council Monday afternoon, it was announced Friday by Fleetwood A. Smith, financial secretary and treasurer of the union.

Flat percentage increases are provided as follows:

Increase of 15 per cent over present salaries to all employees making between $100 and $130 a month.

Increase of 13 per cent over present salaries for all employees making between $131 and $150 a month.

Increase of 12 per cent for all employees now making between $151 and $165 a month.

Increase of 10 per cent for all employees now making between $166 and $195.

Ordinance Provisions.

The ordinance will specify that provisions of the measure shall not apply to members of the fire or police departments or to other employees who already have been granted recent salary raises.

It was declared that the ordinance would affect more than 2,000 city employees and entail an additional expenditure of not less than $250,000 annually, in addition to approximately $300,000 in increased payrolls that would be incurred annually by putting into effect salary increases as proposed for policemen and firemen, and the putting into effect of the $100 minimum wage standard for all semi-skilled laborers and clerical employees of the city.

The ordinance was prepared following the aldermanic board's action last Monday in voting, 7 to 5, against concurrence in a measure adopted by council a week before, seeking to give

ISAAC SCHOEN DIES HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Prominent Atlantan Had Been Leader in Business Circles and Active in Benevolent Work.

Isaac Schoen, prominent Atlanta business man and widely known through lodge affiliations and for benevolent work, died at his home, 707 Ponce de Leon avenue, early Friday night after a year's illness.

He was born in New Albany, Ind., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schoen, August 15, 1867. He moved to Louisville, Ky., when young and obtained a common school education there. Mr. Schoen came to Atlanta 40 years ago and entered business soon after his arrival.

He was for many years prominent in business circles, being president of the Schoen Brothers, incorporated, hide dealers and fertiliser manufacturers. He also was president of the Atlanta Butchers' abattoir.

The Schoen Brothers, incorporated, succeeded the L. Schoen & Son Co., which was founded by his father. Mr. Schoen took an active part in the business which his father founded until his failing health compelled him to retire.

In addition to his other business affiliations, Mr. Schoen was a direc-

Coolidge Agrees To Southern Man As I.C.C. Member

President Gives His Indorsement to Bill To Increase Commission From 11 to 12 Members.

SOUTHERNERS HAD WOODLOCK BEATEN

Rather Than Face Long, Hard Fight, Coolidge Surrenders to Senators of Southern States.

Washington, December 18.—(Special.)—Faced by the certainty of a long fight over the appointment of Thomas F. Woodlock to the interstate commerce commission, President Coolidge has surrendered to the southern democrats and agreed to approve legislation increasing the size of the commission so that the south may have representation.

Mr. Coolidge's indorsement of a bill, which would give the commission 12 members, instead of 11, was made known today at the white house. Pending the working out of the new arrangement, Woodlock's nomination is being withheld, but the president expects to nominate him later.

Woodlock Picked by Coolidge.

Woodlock was selected by President Coolidge early this year to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mark W. Potter, democrat. When Commissioner Potter resigned, the south set up a claim for the place, maintaining its vast interest in the railroad justified a spokesman and representative on the rate-making body. President Coolidge considered numerous candidates from the south and offered the place to one southerner, who declined it. Finally it went to Mr. Woodlock on the theory that an expert in railroad finance was needed on the commission.

Southern senators united against the nomination and Woodlock was not confirmed in the last congress. His name was pigeonholed when the new senate came in last March, and the president gave him a recess appointment, which holds until the senate either definitely rejects or confirms him, or in the absence of any action, until the end of the session.

Suggests Geographical Membership.

Fearing that a situation might arise later, in which the south would have no member on the commission, southern democrats suggested that the interstate commerce commission membership be based on geographical divisions of the country, such as are drawn for the shipping board. President Coolidge doubts if this would be feasible. His spokesman declared he did not see the necessity for adding two members of the commission, as was also suggested, because vacancies occur frequently. This would permit taking care of different sections.

Apparently, none yet has thought of the fact that to add one member to the commission would open the possibility for a tie vote, with probable far-reaching consequences to the railroads and business of the country.

If congress authorizes the addition, the new place will go to a southern democrat. President Coolidge understands that the republicans have as many members as the law allows and, according to his spokesman, he feels that a man's political belief is of little consequence on a judicial board like this commission.

'Flying Yank' Nearing City In Long Run

Seiler Is Expected To Reach Atlanta at 1:30 O'Clock Today.

Athens, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—John J. Seiler, known as the "Flying Yank," champion walker and runner, left Athens at 10 o'clock eastern standard time tonight in a 76-mile cross-country run to Atlanta. Seiler was paced by members of the University of Georgia track squad for 12 miles, and a Wills Sainte Claire automobile locked in high gear will race him to Atlanta. The machine will not be permitted to make a greater speed than six miles an hour.

Hundreds of citizens turned out to see the beginning of the run—the longest ever staged in this state. The

SPECULATION RIFE OVER SUSPENSION OF COL. MITCHELL

Consensus of Opinion Is He Will Await Coolidge's Action, and If His Sentence Stands, Resign.

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—Speculation as to what the five years' suspension from army rank, pay and allowances, meted out to Colonel William Mitchell actually mean, and what the air officer would do in the face of it was rife today throughout congressional and army ranks.

The consensus was that the colonel would await action by President Coolidge on the court's decision and if it was not commuted, he would ask that the president accept his resignation from the army. Meanwhile the air crusader kept his silence, indicating that he would do so until the court sentence had been passed upon.

Three echoes of Colonel's Mitchell's conviction were heard at the capital during the day. Two took the form of resolutions, one by Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, to restore him to his "proper rank in the army," and the other by Representative LaGuardia, socialist, New York, to fix as maximum suspension of 30 days as the penalty for violations of the 96th article of war, under which the colonel was found guilty by the court-martial.

The third was a statement by Representative Frank R. Reid, republican, Illinois, who headed the Mitchell defense staff, in which he assailed the war and navy departments, the court-martial, the army general staff and the navy general board, and announcing that the

REYNOLDS HEADS STATE HOTEL MEN

Columbus Is Selected as Spring Meeting Place at Closing Session of Georgia Hotel Association.

Albany, Ga., December 18.—(AP)—Frank T. Reynolds, of Atlanta, was elected president of the Georgia Hotel Men's association and the next meeting was awarded to Columbus at the final session of the 20th annual convention here this afternoon.

Other officers chosen were Dr. Craig Arnold, of Dahlonega, first vice president; E. Baldwin Young, Jr., Albany, second vice president; L. W. Nelson, Athens, third vice president, and Frank Maloney, Atlanta, secretary and treasurer.

Hotel men of the United States lost $50,000,000 by accepting bad checks last year, according to Horace Weems, of the Hotel Southland, Macon, who is attending the convention here. Mr. Weems declared he knew no means of preventing such a loss except a ban on the handling of personal checks.

Petty thefts, by guests was also a source of considerable loss to hotels, H. P. Anderson, of Millen, declared.

Columbus was selected for the spring meeting place, the date to be announced.

The closing of the convention at noon was followed by a luncheon given by the Albany Kiwanis club. Dr. James B. Turner, newly elected president of the club, presided and acted as toastmaster. The chief speaker was former Governor Chase S. Osborne, of Michigan.

Mr. Reynolds, the new president, has been actively identified with Georgia hotels since 1912 and has just completed a very active year in the office of first vice president of the organization.

In accepting this important post Mr. Reynolds pledged himself to use

DR. A. C. GOODYEAR FIRES AS YOUTH RAISES REVOLVER

James Carey, 20, Dies on Floor of Pharmacy, and Asa Waters, 16, Is Under Arrest.

CLAIM PRISONER HAS CONFESSED

Police State Waters Admits He and Victim of Shooting Had Robbed One Drug Store.

James P. Carey, 20, of Clarkston, was shot and instantly killed at 10:30 o'clock Friday night at a drug store at 15 Andrews avenue, by Dr. A. C. Goodyear, the proprietor, and Carey's companion was captured when the two youths are are alleged to have attempted to hold up the store.

Carey was shot through the right side just below the ribs and dropped to the floor, dying about 10 minutes later before an ambulance could arrive. He was shot just as he was leveling his automatic pistol on Dr. Goodyear as he came from the rear of the store.

Holds Youth for Police.

Dr. Goodyear then held Asa Waters, of Scottdale, Carey's 16-year-old companion at the point of a gun until Call Officers W. A. Goode and W. F. Bullard arrived and placed him under arrest. Only one shot was fired.

Confession that he and Carey robbed a drug store at Ira and Richardson streets last Thursday night is alleged to have been obtained from Waters by Lieutenant W. H. Andrews, of the detective department following his arrest. He denied other recent robberies of drug stores here.

According to the story told Call Officers by Dr. Goodyear, the boys came into the drug store with handkerchiefs tied over their faces and with their coat collars turned up. He had been suspicious of a negro who had been in the drug store a few minutes earlier and had armed himself with his revolver, he said.

When he saw the youths, Carey attempted to level his revolver but he shot first, Dr. Goodyear stated. Carey died without making a statement.

Tried by Recorder.

Carey was convicted of carrying a pistol Thursday afternoon in recorder's court after being arrested last Wednesday night in a pool room at Five Points. He was placed on probation.

Waters is alleged to have confessed that the roadster automobile which they were driving Friday night was stolen by Carey last week from Mrs. Minnie Willis, of 216 Luckie street. He said, according to the police, that he was in Scottdale at the time the machine was stolen and Carey drove there and brought him back to Atlanta on the same night and that they robbed a Richardson street drug store.

He is alleged to have confessed to

5 CHILDREN DIE AS HOME BURNS

Holden, Mass., December 18.—(AP). Five children of John J. Hoey were burned to death early today in a fire which destroyed the Hoey home, a two-story dwelling. The eldest was a girl of 15, the others boys, about 11, 9 and 7 years old, and a baby girl. Mrs. Hoey was ously but not dangerously burned. The father, two of the seven children, John Murphy, Mrs. Hoey's father, and a farm hand escaped injury.

Murphy arose soon after 3 o'clock and while in the back of the house he noticed a light through a crack of the hall door. Supposing Mrs. Hoey was coming downstairs, he opened the door, and was confronted by flames. He shouted to arouse the sleeping family and rushed outside to get a ladder he had left leaning against the house to assist in rescuing the occupants. The children had moved the ladder last night, and could not be found.

President Favors Budget Extention To Improve River

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—Although inclined to stand by budget estimates, President Coolidge believes it might be advisable to increase the amount allotted annually for improving the channel of the Mississippi river and its chief tributaries.

The president has been impressed by the necessity of expediting waterway development in the Mississippi basin and, in addition to the $10,000,000 provided annually for work on the Mississippi, he is hopeful that it will be possible to increase, and perhaps double, this amount. No final determination can be made, however, he believes, until the tax bill is enacted and the future state of the treasury determined.

Secretary Davis, of the war department, is making an inquiry to ascertain whether his department has legal authority to establish a barge line on the upper Mississippi similar to the one operated below St. Louis. The president would look with favor on encouraging barge transportation on the river as far north as St. Paul and Minneapolis, and believes that the commercial fesibility of such service has been demonstrated by the line on the lower river.

Cancer Expert Goes To London for Study Of Lead Treatment

Baltimore, December 18.—(AP)—In order that the American medical profession may be fully informed regarding the lead treatment for cancer recently announced by Dr. W. Blair Bell, Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of the Crocker Institute of Cancer Research, Columbia university, has sailed to London to make a first-hand investigation.

Dr. George A. Soper, managing director of the American Society for Control of Cancer, who returned a few weeks ago from an investigation of what European scientists are doing in cancer research, told today for the first time the result of his observations. In his comment upon the work of Dr. Bell, he said that it was clear that "some very remarkable results had been obtained in some instances."

He emphasized the fact that Dr. Bell himself cautioned against the use of the lead treatment by any but skillful hands.

"Reliance should not be placed yet upon the results of European laboratories for practical results," Dr. Soper said. "Our greatest hope in combating cancer still lies in full and skillful application of the facts already in our possession. We know a vast amount about preventive hygiene, which has not yet become the common knowledge of people generally, and which, if generally known, would save thousands of lives annually. Early diagnosis and treatment always is to be emphasized."

7TH FOUND GUILTY IN LANGSTON CASE

Fayetteville, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—With the conviction here today of Charlie Waller who was given a life-term sentence in connection with the slaying in October, 1922, of James C. Langston, rural mail carrier, seven men have been convicted in the case and given life sentences.

The jury in the Waller case returned a verdict today after having deliberated since Thursday afternoon. Guilty with recommendation was the verdict and Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., who is presiding at the Fayette term of superior court here, pronounced the life sentence.

Langston was found dead beside his automobile on his mail route, having been killed, it was claimed by men who thought that he had reported moonshining activities in the community. Ora Whittle, Oscar Dutton and John Waller were convicted several months ago in the case and are now serving life sentences.

Since the case entered its second phase, Rainey Cauthern and Melvin Windham, who confessed their connection with the plot to kill Langston, pleaded guilty and received life sentences; Melvin Brown and Charlie Waller, brother of John Waller, were convicted and given life terms.

The eighth defendant, Arthur Alexander, today was granted a change of venue and he will be tried in Griffin on January 14, Judge Searcy announced.

Windham, Cauthern, Brown and Charlie Waller were carried to Atlanta today to have Bertillon measurements recorded, before the men enter prison.

Charlie Waller has applied for new trial hearing and it is expected that Brown will also file motion for a rehearing in his case.

9,902 PENSIONERS AWAIT SCRIP ACTION

There are 9,902 Confederate pensioners in Georgia, a complete compilation, just finished by Commissioner of Pensions John W. Clark, shows. Total pensions due to this number are $2,497,992.06, it was announced, for which the state, by action of the last legislature, has provided a "scrip" disbursement.

Colonel Clark submitted the complete list to Governor Walker Friday and it now remains for the chief executive to find some means of turning the "scrip" issue into actual money so that the veterans and widows of veterans may be paid. While the "scrip bill" has been neither declared legal or illegal, the state is confronted with the problem of retiring any such paper issued, and as yet no financial arrangements have been made to take care of that end of the question.

Pieces of scrip made available range from $42.06 to $525. Pending the decision of the governor whether to call an extra session of the legislature, one of the duties of which would be consideration of the pension problem, the matter of providing a means of retiring the scrip must be held in abeyance.

with offering bribes in addition to the liquor violations. Indictments had previously been returned against this group, which includes Ralph W. Stone, a former prohibition director; A. E. Bennett, Bernard R. Rumps, former dry agents; Harry F. Schlau, Louis Abelson, Louis Oribari and Morris Zimbroff, wine dealers and former state Senator George R. Bruce.

Those named with the Erie railroad are Patrick F. Sullivan, Joseph Soltis, Andrew Botz, John Curry, Joseph Graffe, Frank T. Vansk, Emil Cerney, Joseph Lucas and Robert F. Adams, of Sayre, Pa., and William Dillon, of Waverly, N. Y.

The indictments recite the method of transporting more than 100 barrels from Waverly to Chicago suburbs, and its subsequent consignment to Chicago.

A number of instances were given in which those indicted with Owen sold wine, mostly in 3,000 gallon lots, and arranged delivery, often taking a "cut" in the sale price for themselves. Bonds for Major Owens and others, with the exception of three, were set at $10,000 each. Bonds ranging from $1,500 to $5,000 were set for the remaining three.

Bonds of $5,000 each were set for those named in the beer indictments.

BORAH LAUNCHES ATTACK UPON COURT

make one and possibly more speeches later in the fight, but desired to get the attitude of the opposition before the country in a general way at the opening of the fight. The real dynamite of the irreconcilables is being held until after the Christmas holidays.

Though he is one of the most concerned in the outcome of the world court issue, President Coolidge is keeping in the background. He was emphatic enough in his message to congress, but he has been silent since.

Borah's three reservations provide that:

1. The statute under which the court operates shall not be construed so as to require the United States to depart from its traditional policy of non-inerference in political questions abroad or departing from its traditional attitude toward purely American questions. This would protect the Monroe doctrine.

2. No force or economic pressure shall be used to enforce judgments of the court.

3. Every nation party to the court must approve any change in the court statute increasing the jurisdiction of the tribunal.

Lenroot, speaking for the court, said:

"This court is American in its origin and substantially in its present form was proposed by American statesmen many years ago. It was first proposed at the first Hague peace conference in 1899, although that effort failed. In 1907 former Secretary of State Root again proposed creation of a permanent court of international justice."

Walsh, also for the court, put the case thus:

"All controversies between nations likely to lead to war will go before the court but the assumption that it will usher in an era of perpetual peace is a delusion because the fact is that we take but a feeble, halting step in the direction of promoting world pace.

"Staggering as it may seem, there are those who maintain we should not even make a gesture toward cooperation to that end.

"I protest that the league does not and will not, and in the nature of things cannot, control or influence the decisions or opinions of the court.

"I would prefer to sit upon the council of the league where we might have a voice in the proceedings than to sit on the court where a vote amounts to nothing and where opinions may be rendered by a mere majority. The power that directs this court is a power in which we have no voice."

He quoted Dr. James Brown Scott, advisor of Elihu Root at the international conference which forms the court, as having said: "The court is the agent of the league and intimately connected with it."

Borah continued: "I think that will be proven true before we get through here. It was never until the campaign to take the United States into the court that any language was ever used that the court was not a part of the league."

SPEED RECORD BROKEN AS TAX BILL PASSES

come, recognized as "earned income," from $10,000 to $20,000. A credit of 25 per cent is allowed for earned income, after other deductions have been made.

Estate Tax Rates Cut.

The bill provides a substantial decrease in estate tax rates, fixing the maximum at 20 per cent on $10,000,000, and over. The maximum now is 40 per cent. The tax begins with 1 per cent on $50,000. The credit allowed for estate or inheritance taxes of states against the federal tax was increased from 25 to 80 per cent, which was done in order to force states such as Florida, which have no state estate taxes, to enact these levies.

A number of so-called "nuisance" taxes and war-time excise levies were repealed, such as the tax on jewelry, works of art, bowling alleys, shooting galleries, mah jongg.

The tax on passenger automobiles and on parts and accessories was reduced from 5 to 3 per cent, and the tax on trucks was repealed. Efforts to abolish these taxes failed.

Tobacco Rates Not Cut.

Despite several efforts, no reductions were made in tobacco taxes, outside the reduction on cigars provided originally in the bill, which will amount to about $12,000,000. Admission taxes also were retained, with the exception of that on the "spoken drama," which was repealed.

The tax on commercial alcohol was cut in half, from $2.20 to $1.10 a gallon, after an extended debate on two amendments, one to leave it at $2.20, the other to abolish it altogether, both of which lost.

The motion to send the bill back to committee was made by Rainey, Illinois, Democrat, who led the fight for the minority on several issues. He is a member of the committee. All of the insurgent republicans and a number of democrats supported him. Most of the democratic leaders, however, lined up with the republicans against sending the bill back.

Pretended Children of Czar

15 RUSSIANS WHO SPONSORED PAIR ALSO ARRESTED

Jailed for Fraud on Peasants

Odessa, Russia, December 18.—(AP)—Periodical stories have appeared in the European and American press to the effect that the Romanoff family, the ruling house of Russia before the revolution, was still alive, but few intelligent people in Russia have believed these talks until this week, when a Russian boy and a beautiful girl, about the same age of the Czarevitch Alexis and Princess Tatiana, turned up in Odessa.

Bearing a faint resemblance to the slain prince and princess, they were believed by the untutored peasantry and religious fanatics to be the real heir to the throne and his sister, until the local police made an investigation and found them to be fraudulent. The arrest of 15 Russians who sponsored the pretenders followed.

A former czarist officer named Kozlenko, leader of the group, has confessed that he and his associates created the fake prince and princess in order to extort money from devout and superstitious peasants. The pseudo prince, he disclosed, was the epileptic son of a member of the group, and with the girl was taken daily to the so-called miraculous grave of a priest who had been canonized, where pious peasants gathered daily to pray. The guileless villagers brought gifts here for the pretenders.

All the members of the group, including the "prince" and "princess," are now in jail.

HAMMOND NOMINATED AS ENVOY TO SPAIN

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—Ogden H. Hammond, of New Jersey, was nominated today to be ambassador to Spain.

He will succeed Alexander P. Moore, of Pittsburgh, who has resigned.

Although his residence is at Bernardsville, N. J., Mr. Hammond is extensively interested in realty development in New York city, where his office is located.

He served two terms in the New Jersey house of representatives.

COURT ENJOINS SALE OF GASOLINE AT OVER 16 CENTS

Jackson, Miss., December 18.—(AP)—The Texas Oil company and the Standard Company of Kentucky are prohibited from selling gasoline at more than 16 cents a gallon in Mississippi, the state tax of three cents included, under an injunction issued today by Judge J. G. McGowen of the supreme court upon the petition of Attorney General Rush Knox.

The petition charges that for the alleged purpose of destroying or attempting to destroy competition, the two companies have been selling gasoline at 16 cents a gallon in Tunica county, a much lower price than in other counties, and in violation of the anti-trust laws of Mississippi.

The action was brought under chapter 69 of Hemingway's code, which makes it unlawful for an individual or corporation to sell a commodity at a lower price in one section of the state than at another, the cost of delivery considered.

The petition further charged, on information and belief, that the defendants have entered into an unlawful combination agreement and conspiracy to control the price of gasoline, kerosene, lubricating oil and all other oil products in Mississippi, and that the agreement is of long standing. It is also charged that, as a result of the agreement, products are higher than is warranted by the price of crude oil, the cost of refining, sale and delivery.

TWO MORE BANKS GO TO WALL IN DENVER

Denver, Col., December 18.—(AP)—Two small state banks, failing to open their doors today, brought Denver's total of closed banks in two days to five.

The banks which closed are the Capitol Hill bank and the Metropolitan State bank. Heavy withdrawals caused officials to place the institutions in the hands of the bank examiners.

AGED WATCHMAN VICTIM OF COLD; CONDITION SERIOUS

W. E. Reynolds, aged watchman of the Burnett Klapper Furniture company, 874 Marietta street, early Friday morning was found in the basement of the building unconscious, suffering from the intense cold. He was rushed to Grady hospital.

When Reynolds failed to make his regular report at 2 o'clock Friday morning an inspector of the A. D. T. investigated.

After medical aid was rendered at Grady hospital he regained consciousness but is reported to be in a critical condition. He is supposed to have become drowsy as a result of the cold and to have fallen asleep.

police that he and Carey had planned two other robberies Friday night in addition to the Andrew avenue drug store. The pistol which Carey carried Friday night had been given him by his sweetheart, according to Waters' alleged confession.

Pistol Belonged to Sister.

The pistol which was found in his possession last week belonged to his sister, who, Waters said, was a railroad agent at Scottdale. He said that bond had been furnished for Carey last week by a local bondsman at the request of the sister.

He told officers that he first met Carey about a month ago in a dance hall on Peachtree street. Later he went to the home of the sister with Carey, he said. They had done odd jobs about the Scottdale depot for some time and later Carey came to Atlanta and stole the machine which they had used in their robberies, according to the alleged confession.

Dr. Goodyear was placed under arrest by officers on a charge of disorderly conduct and his bond placed at $500. This was furnished.

Waters told police his mother had died when he was an infant and he had spent most of his life traveling with his father and an older brother, Delmas Waters. He said he attended the Calhoun school on Piedmont avenue and later attended the Barnesville Agricultural and Mechanical school for two years. He has not attended school for the past year, Waters said. He said his brother had left him five years ago and that he had not heard from him since.

SPECULATION RIFE OVER SUSPENSION

"fight" for a unified air service "has only begun."

At the war department, the trial record was put in shape for transmission, probably tomorrow, to the board of review in the judge advocate general's office. Counsel who prosecuted the case against Colonel Mitchell appeared confident that the review board would find no errors of procedure had been committed which would furnish a basis for a mistrial decision.

At the white house, it was made clear that no comment on the court's findings could be expected until after the president had passed on the case. That it would reach him for action early next year, after the review board had concluded its examination of the papers and transmitted them to the secretary of war, was indicated in other quarters.

It was the unofficial opinion of some army legal experts that no military tribunal had the right to deprive any officer or enlisted man of all pay and allowances for five years and keep him during that time under army control, unable to accept outside employment without permission. This sentence, it was said, might be held on appeal to civil courts to constitute cruel and unusual punishment, since it might deprive the person convicted of the necessities of life. To this thought was added the question how the law could be construed to take into consideration the private resources of the accused.

Those interested in the more strictly financial phase of the court's verdict estimated that it was equivalent to a $50,000 fine. That sum was calculated to represent approximately five years' pay and allowances which Colonel Mitchell would have to forfeit under the court's verdict.

Status as Officer.

Other interesting phases of the situation confronting the air officer included that of his status as an army officer, suspended without pay, and still subjected to army regulations. In that respect, as some observers saw it, his position would be comparable to that of an officer on the retired list, except for the difference of pay. He would be privileged to travel about the country as he pleased or to leave the country with permission of the war department. If the department approved, he also could obtain private employment during the period of suspension.

On the other hand, it was said, the colonel would not be allowed, during the sentence, to wear any of his prized decorations for valor and distinguished military service, although he could, on appropriate occasions, wear his uniform. On the basis of the same authoritative opinion, he could not, during the five-year period, hold public office, as that would conflict with his obligations to the army.

ing an automobile accident Friday at Spring and Simpson streets, in which he was badly injured.

Dodger was treated at Grady hospital and later arrested by Call Officers G. E. Williams and J. H. Crankshaw. Dodger was bruised and cut about the head and left arm. According to Officers Williams and Crankshaw, he was driving his machine south on Spring street and collided with an automobile driven by Miss Edna Anderson, of Dawsonville.

Miss Anderson's car was badly damaged and Dodger's machine overturned from the force of the impact. Miss Anderson escaped injury.

Caldwell Injured.

Broughton Caldwell, 14, of 262 Crumley street, was treated at Grady for bruises and cuts about the right knee. He told doctors that he was hurt when struck down by an automobile. He did not state where the accident occurred.

L. G. Henry, 22, of 30 Chapel street, was injured on the left leg when struck by an automobile, he told doctors at Grady. No report of the accident was filed at the police station.

Mrs. C. F. Anderson, whose address physicians at Grady did not learn, was treated for a badly bruised left foot and ankle. She said she was injured as she stepped from an automobile.

H. L. Turner, 19, of Hapeville, was treated at Grady Thursday night for a broken right arm. His arm was broken in cranking his automobile, he said.

every effort to further the association's interest.

"The hotels of this country," he said, "represent an investment of over ten billion dollars and ours is the country's eighth business in size. Having reached this position it is imperative that the organization movement so successfully headed by Thomas D. Green, president of American Hotel association with which we are affiliated, be participated in by every Georgia hotel operator. Matters of importance, legal and otherwise, merit our attention and will receive my personal supervision insofar as my work will avail the hotels in our association of real good."

The importance of good roads as affects the hotel business came in for a large share of discussion during the convention.

A woman's auxiliary to the state organization was proposed.

"FLYING YANK" NEARS CITY ON LONG RUN

contest is one of a series of tests of speed and endurance which have been sponsored by The Constitution.

Huge Rowe, of The Athens Banner-Herald, special correspondent of The Constitution, acted as starter.

Seller took the lead, but when Georgia university track men resumed following the 12-mile pacing, they stated that it seemed to be a see-saw affair, with the car taking the lead at times, only to lose it later to the runner.

The wizard track man holds the world's championship for ten miles and numerous other records.

Reports from the racing party late Friday night were to the effect that Seller was in fine condition and making good time.

Attendants, following in another car, provided Seller with Southern bread, baked by the Stone Baking company, of Atlanta. Seller selected this after a careful analysis of its food value had been made. He is using Coca-Cola as his only beverage.

Seller is wearing shoes furnished him by the Fred S. Stewart Shoe company, of Atlanta.

Before the run began he declared that he was in fine condition, and that recent workouts had put him back to 180 pounds, his right weight—and that his wind was perfect.

When Seller reaches Stone Mountain this morning, he will be met by several crack long-distance men from the Georgia Tech track squad, and will be paced into the city.

Telegrams and special delivery letters from former associates and friends in all parts of the country reached Seller just before he left Athens.

Officials declared that if the present pace is maintained, the race should end about 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in front of Loew's Grand theater, the terminus of the run.

Officials of the union prepared the ordinance in its revised form with the expressed belief that it would overcome objections voiced by those members of council who opposed it.

Mr. Schoen took an active interest in benevolent work. He was at one time president of the Hebrew Benevolent association of the Jewish temple and served as president of the Jewish Federation of Charities two years ago. He was deeply interested in the Home for Crippled Children.

Served on Hardwick's Staff.

During the term of Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, he served as lieutenant colonel on Governor Hardwick's staff. Mr. Schoen was a trustee of Oglethorpe university and took an active part in furthering the interests of the school.

He was a prominent Mason, being a member of the Piedmont Masonic lodge. He also was a member of Yaarab temple of the Shrine and of the Scottish Rite, Atlanta consistory, No. 2.

Mr. Schoen was married June 17, 1890, to Miss Essie Haas, of Cincinnati, niece of the late Jacob Haas, of Atlanta. In addition to his widow, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Clarence Wenar, of New Orleans, La.; a son, Gabriel H. Schoen, and a brother, Samuel Schoen, of Atlanta.

THE MITCHELL VERDICT.

The verdict in the court-martial trial of Colonel William Mitchell, charged with unethical criticisms of the war and navy administrations, particularly as relating to the government's air services, was expected.

The fact is, whatever may have been the provoking features—and undeniably there were many—the specific charges were not denied.

A court of generals, upon whose shoulders rest the responsibility of discipline among the fighting forces, could not have brought in a different verdict without having caused a revolution in the entire national defense establishments.

Therefore, while Colonel Mitchell will go for the next five years without rank, command, duty or pay, he will not be stripped of the uniform. That is to say, no disgrace hangs above him.

But after all the incident has not been without avail.

There were so many evidences of intolerable conditions existing in both the army and navy establishments—conditions not only involving the demoralized air services but the lack of coordination and the existing of jealousies and intrigues, and the dominancy of inefficiency in high places—that congress must take cognizance of the situation, and bring about drastic revisions and reorganizations.

To this end Colonel Mitchell's personal sacrifices will serve to advantage—and to greater advantage through orderly, than through disorderly and revolutionary tactics.

The special congressional committee has already found many of Colonel Mitchell's charges true, and it has recommended unanimously a unification of the air services, and a concentration of all branches of national defense under one administrative head. These are in absolute accord with Colonel Mitchell's publicity crusade, to which—naturally enough—the army and navy heads and their chiefs of staffs, objected.

Colonel Mitchell's inordinate and extreme public criticisms of the army and navy administrations can not be justified per se. That is to say, insubordination must not exist in the fighting service, even in peace times. Discipline must not be lowened. The morale must not be lowered through the flexibility of established rules and regulations.

Colonel Mitchell is fond of publicity. He covets the public acclaim. He has possibly been swayed from better judgment by it. But to the extent that he, with deliberation, made his own position as a stormy petrel, so he possibly now covets martyrdom. In his present position, therefore, it is possible that he enjoys a greater personal satisfaction than if he had been acquitted. Such are the peculiarities sometimes of genius.

At any rate the Mitchell trial will serve the country a good purpose, and the convicted army officer, who had been previously demoted for alleged insubordination, will—if he conducts himself with manly discretion from this time forward—go down in history in honor rather than in dishonor. All will depend upon his own future conduct. Proper loyalty to his government will suggest now that he undertake to help congress in an orderly manner, to bring about the reforms that are most needed. The public will be disappointed and grieved if he attempts to commercialize and exploit himself in a way that will create further public distrust, unrest, insurgency and rebellion.

RELIEF IMPERATIVE!

Every available force in America should act quickly and drastically to lift the express embargo that has been clamped down upon Florida south of Jacksonville—which is practically all of the state.

The embargo covers everything shipped by express into the state, except foodstuffs, and—the most unfortunate situation of all—covers also all shipments of citrus fruits and fish, two of Florida's paramount industries, out of the state.

Coming at this time—in the very heart of the citrus season when fully one-half of America is looking to Florida for its Christmas oranges and other citrus fruits—it will not only be disappointing to millions of people, but injurious to two of Florida's greatest permanent resources.

This is "killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

The fact that a freight embargo also exists on building material, a condition that has thrown thousands of workmen out of employment, and seriously handicapped constructive developments, only accentuate a distressing and alarming situation.

The outstanding sources of permanent revenue production in Florida from natural resources, outside of her pine products, is her fruit and vegetable crops, and her fish and oyster production. The latter is perhaps the largest of any state in the union by reason of her long gulf and Atlantic coasts, and her network of inland waterways. The winter is the peak season for both.

The situation therefore, of an express embargo at this particular time, blanketing all of Florida south of Jacksonville, which covers the entire citrus belt and most of the fish industry, is very serious.

The freight embargo south of Jacksonville has so congested the Jacksonville yards that even temporary sidings placed on every available foot of ground can not give relief.

The situation demands the instant cooperation of the interstate commerce commission and possibly the emergency intervention of the department of commerce. Surely the government will not stand idly and see the great citrus and fish industries in Florida seriously injured, even for a season, those engaged in them financially embarrassed, by a situation such as this, if it is humanly possible to find emergency relief.

WHAT GEORGIA OFFERS.

The Sandersville Progress tells the following story of how a northwestern farmer can find sunshine and happiness and wealth—if he works—in Georgia:

"An Iowa farmer who settled in Pierce county in this state about 13 years ago has just sold his pecan crop for $2,400. He also sells about 125 dozen eggs a week. He saw his opportunity and is making a fortune from the one hundred acres of land which he bought at a low price. He also sells several varieties of fruit."

Out on the Iowa prairies it took no doubt about all he could make in seven months to stay warm the other five months. In other words, if his farm experiences were about like the rest of the Iowa farmers he carried a load of wheat to the elevator, and brought a load of coal back. In Pierce county he doesn't have to buy any coal. He can work outdoors every day in the year. He can keep his chickens and hogs and cows on open pastures every day. He doesn't have to close them in from the blizzards, and heat their houses from October to April to keep them from freezing to death. He can keep something going to market all the time—as for instance, 125 dozen eggs, worth something like $65, every week.

The point of especial concern is there are 161 counties in Georgia in which the Iowa, or Illinois, or Kansas, or Dakota—or the farmer from any section, can do the same thing. If the pecan is not profitably grown in some of the counties, peaches are, or apples or berries or melons or potatoes—and cotton and corn and wheat and rye and the other staple crops. In most counties all of these can be grown.

The wonder is that more Iowa farmers, and more farmers from any less favored section, should not come to Georgia, and do what the farmer in Pierce is doing. And they are coming. They will come in greater numbers — ten, twenty, thirty to one—when Georgia builds her roads, and improves her schools, and does a few other things that she needs to do, and must and will do.

No state in America offers more substantial opportunities to the homeseekers from other states than Georgia.

Mitchell is still putting it over on 'em in the headlines.

If we can just pull through this income tax weather all may yet be well.

In great concern for the general welfare, The Indianapolis News says: "If you must drink Christmas booze arrange all your worldly affairs, and name a trustworthy administrator before you do so."

The Holiday Train.

Don't care if it comes in the snow or rain,—
It's comin'!
You can hear the wheels of the Christmas train,—
It's comin'!
Comin' along to the rich and the poor,
With the joys of the Christmas in glittering store;
Be at the window, and open the door,—
It's comin'!

II.

To the little ones, dreaming the dark night away,
It's comin'!
With songs for their singing and sweet words to say,
It's comin'!
To the lambs that are sheltered, or far from the fold;
To the firesides bright where sweet stories are told;
With love that is dearer than jewels and gold,—
It's comin'!

Singing on the way,

But Fortune comes to see it

Singing, and singing of the morning!

Oh, the land where you're a-living
Is the promised land for you,
Singing, and singing in the morning!

His Political Sentiments.

"Uncle John" has started a new series of prose-poems in the Excelsior Springs Standard. In this one he pays his respects to politics—

"In politics, my uncle Jimps is plumb aristocratic; he treats the opposition with a pre-historic snub, but, whether he knows right from left—is highly problematic, and he'd understand ye better if you said it with a club! He couldn't tell a "principle" if seen or heard or tasted—not recognize a "platform" if he met one in the road—hence, any sort of argyment with him is effort wasted—it's hard to drag a sinner from his ancestral abode. He votes "the way his daddy did" both in and out of season; he sticks around the swill-trough like a measly-spotted shoat; this "party solidarity" has blotted out his reason—and while Jimps socks the ballot in, his daddy casts the vote! The rest might agree with Jimps, where sentyment's compellin'. Inheritin' his politics, he crawls out on a limb and suns hisself, complacent, till it gets to be hard tellin' what happens to the gover'ment—or what it does to him. We've got to face the issues, as they rise in wild profusion; we've got to use intelligence, if Liberty prevails—when follerin' a bell-sheep is a snare and a delusion, we better grab 'em by the horns—instead of by their tails!

Nuggets by the Wayside.

(As the Dalton Citizen sees them.)

Every man longs for an opportunity to display himself, says a philosopher. And that's the reason it is easy to get men to march in a parade.

The man who pushes his business along all the while will not have any time to spend worrying about what everybody, or nobody, has to say about him.

"Some men are too lazy to have good luck," says the Type Metal Magazine. Don't know about that. The laziest man is generaly the best fisherman and the biggest liar.

And the dispatches further tell us that an ocean liner, entering one of our ports, was equipped with a stilling outfit. If this pace is kept up it won't be long until everybody will be doing it.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

New York, December 18.—They may be ever so sophisticated and cynical; they may wear a mannish bob and hyper-modern skirts, that is to say extremely short to show off their independence and disregard for convention. They may be satiated with life and tired of men, as they say. But the brass buttons of the naval Jackies, who parade on Broadway when the fleet is in the Hudson don't pass without an envious look.

In that respect the New York flapper is no different from the Berliner fraulein or the Parisian demoiselle. Uniformed men are still favorites, and that song about all the nice girls loving a sailor is not so foolish as it sounds.

A Chinese play will invade Broadway within the next few weeks. It will be staged at the Nora Bayes theater, on the roof of the Al Jolson theater. The chief performer will be a famous German actress from Vienna and the language in which it will be produced here is Yiddish. New York at least is for the League of Nations.

Such are Gotham ways. Everybody knows that the writers of southern mammy songs and Irish ballads are mostly gents of the Hebrew persuasion, but few realize that the best Jewish impersonator in town is a blue-eyed Irishman from Cork.

Since Cantor Joseph Rosenblatt has appeared a few times at benefit performances, rumor has gone around that several Jewish cantors plan to desert the synagogue to become entertainers at a kosher cafe chantant.

A Broadway impresario was telling a group of newspapermen round the festive board in the Club Ciro last night how a certain up and coming violinist always maintained that money had no value for him. Money to that man was dirtier than filthy lucre. He despised it. It was beneath his dignity as an artist to talk about it or even think about it.

"But," said the impresario, "on the night when I managed his debut at Aeolian hall, I saw the fellow in his true light. We had a passable house, and I sent back word from the box office to raise the curtain. I waited a quarter of an hour, it lengthened into half an hour. The audience was becoming impatient. People were stamping their feet and clapping their hands.

"At last I managed to get away from the office and rushed back stage. I met the artist. He said h would not budge until he had a certified check for 75 per cent of the receipts. I told him his money was safe. But he would not listen until after a great deal of trouble I got some rich patrons to guarantee payment. The concert started an hour late—and was a flop."

I saw Herbert Bosworth, the movie actor, the other day on Fifth avenue with a week's growth of hair on his chin of which he was obviously very conscious and ashamed. It is nothing unusual to see young men dressed in the height of fashion strolling around the streets or entering some smart supper club with a beard of which their grandfathers would have been proud.

Whiskers are not laid off with the other make-up in picture taking. Steve Carr, who played in "The Thundering Heard," had the appearance of a first-class hobo when he came in town, and Noah Beery recently breezed in with a raggedy bolshevik linoleum mop on his face that must at least have been twelve months old.

Ernest Torrence is another who feels the unkind and sneering looks of passers-by very keenly. He told me that he hears more uncomplimentary remarks than a tax collector. But then a little suffering for the realism in art doesn't seem killing. The burden is lightened by the pay checks.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

Pan-Arabia.

A federated near eastern republic, consisting of the independent Arab states of Syria, Lebanon, Palestine, Irak and Transjordania, is the proposal of Syrian nationalists as the solution of the present muddled situation with France involved in Syria and Britain in Mosul and Irak. Damascus is proposed as the federal capital of this union. The French are to withdraw from Syria and the British from Palestine and Irak. It is said the plan has the moral backing of Turkey and Russia and that support and money will be sought in America to begin a campaign of intensive propaganda. It is doubtful, however, that such a plan will ever be realized. For one thing the British are pledged to remain in Palestine to make that country into a homeland for the Jewish people. This pledge, contained in the famous Balfour declaration, was not merely made to the handful of Jews who were in the Holy Land in 1918, but to the Jews of the world. And that Britain's mandatory mission is so interpreted in other circles is evidenced by the fact that M. Doumergue, president of France, and M. Painleve, former premier, have accepted honorary membership in a Palestine committee, which views the execution of the terms of the British mandate as a simple question of justice. That Turkey should support the move is easily understood, while Russia has lately become so envious of British prestige in world Jewry that any scheme that will make trouble for Britain is bound to be sponsored in Moscow. The Crimean land settlement for Russian Jews is but one more effort to alienate Jewish affection for England.

* * * *

Poincare-La Guerre.

If M. Briand has proven himself such a champion of European peace that his name is linked with peace, "Briand-La Paix," the doubtful distinction of being linked with the war idea goes to M. Poincare, who is called Poincare-La Guerre by a liberal French magazine. His latest declaration is to the effect that Germany is still thinking of a war of revenge. What seems not to be taken into account sufficiently is that Germany always abandoned thought of war very easily. Never is the German happier than when he works, produces and is fecund. When he is hampered in the realization of this natural inclination, he is irritable and nervous and light to anger. When, however, he has an opportunity to work his thoughts at once turn into peaceful channels and he becomes the most genial of humans, with a profound sense of duty to all humanity. The best example is President Hindenburg himself. He was the hope of chauvinists, militarists and anti-Semites. He has become a coworker with social democrats and the nationalist press even takes alarm at his progressive liberalism, as they call it.

A Czech Legend.

Every visitor to Prague has to see the Altneu Synagog, but few know the story of how and why it came to be built. A Jewess once took in a stray cat that was in pain. She made it comfortable behind the stove in a coal box. A few days later the cat disappeared, but the coal on which she had lain had changed into gold. She showed the gold to her husband, who interpreted the miracle as a sign from God and used the money to build the house of worship. But being a pious man, he was possessed with a desire to die in Jerusalem. He also wanted to see the cat again to thank it. One day the feline was spotted in the garden. He followed the animal and she jumped from the roof of a garden house right into the synagog. The man hastened after her, but he saw her sink through the floor. He approached the spot and discovered an opening. Without a moment's thought he plunged into the dark. At last he saw daylight ahead. When he emerged he found himself in a strange city, and the people told him he was in the Holy City. Whereupon he died of joy.

Where Work Is Sacred.

A writer in the London "Empire Mail," after a visit to the continent expresses frank surprise at the attitude of the country people of Flanders. "There is no rancor nor hatred left in them," he says, "nor really any ill-feeling against the erstwhile enemy." The Flemish peasants are no better than other human beings, but neither are they worse. Their whole time is taken up with their passionate love for the soil and its care. To them it is Holy Mother Flanders whose breast must be healed and the scars smoothed away. While the women make their bobbins and spindles fly and make their incomparable lace, the men are out in the fields. At eventide they march back to the village singing. Then the smell of savory cooking hangs in the air. Later there is serious talk at the tavern. But when the watchman sounds his rattle they turn indoors and close the shutters. Life is serene and beautiful in Flanders. The days leave no regret, for they are taken up with work. Work is the physician of body and soul. —P. V. P.

RIGHT OF RAILWAYS THROUGH PUBLIC PROPERTY SET OUT

Right of railways to establish right-of-ways through public property in Georgia was established Friday by action of the state supreme court in declaring legal action of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad in running its line through a street of Tifton, Ga.

The case came to the supreme court after action was taken by the city council of Tifton in granting the railway such a right, and after the Georgia public service commission had acquiesced in the petition of the road.

A protest was filed by a group of citizens of Tifton on the contention that the city council had no legal right to condemn public property in favor of the railroad and that the public service commission had erred in approving such condemnation.

FLORIDA EMBARGO TO BE LIFTED SOON

The express embargo on perishable shipments from Florida, placed because of railroad congestion, probably will be lifted within the next two or three days, as conditions are gradually improving, according to a statement Friday by W. S. McFarland, general manager of the Atlanta office of the American Railway Express company.

The embargo on these shipments was placed because of congestion in traffic and because of the crowded condition of depots in Jacksonville. The only effect the embargo will have on Atlanta will be to delay thousands of shipments of citrus fruits originating at Florida points and consigned to Atlanta, it was learned.

AGED MAN STILL IS UNIDENTIFIED AT GRADY HOSPITAL

Lying unconscious on a bed at Grady hospital while physicians are fighting a valiant battle to save his life, an unidentified elderly man is yet unidentified after more than 36 hours of fruitless investigation by county and city police. He was found in a clump of bushes unconscious and rigid from the intense cold near Maplewood stop on the Oglethorpe car line early Thursday morning.

It is believed the man was struck by an automobile on Peachtree road, dragged into the bushes and left to die.

DIVIDEND DECLARED BY FULTON NATIONAL

The dividend will amount to approximately $26,000, which will be paid stockholders on January 1, 1926.

My Story of Atlanta -:- -:- By Sam W. Small

CHAPTER XVIII.

Log Cabin Schools.

The Georgia spirit has always been ardent for educational foundations and the early Atlantans were not aliens to that spirit. As we have already recorded, so soon as their children were many enough to make a community school necessary, one was opened in the log house that served as both chapel and schoolroom. At that stage of settlement a public subscription or appropriation for school support was out of the question, but promises of individual support with pupils and pecuniam were enough to tempt a teacher. The first school began to function in 1845, and the lady who manipulated the fescue and applied the hickory on the apogees of the absent-minded or obstreperous was Miss Martha Reed. Fame does no more than broadcast her name.

In 1847 two other private schools were initiated, but the increasing population after several years outgrew these, and because many of the parents were not able to pay the demanded tuition fees, a publicly supported school was demanded. The city council responded by establishing the Holland free school. It seems to have functioned as well as the limited appropriations that could be made for it would allow. Those who could easily pay tuition continued to patronize the more select private schools, some of which came to be conducted by men and women of superior education and teaching facu[illegible].

While there has been a wealth of sentiment among our people for popular education, there has been a strange and strong inertia in the matter of liberally providing for it.

Atlanta was not immune from that contradiction. Her people professed a purpose to be abreast of any, and ahead of many, in all progressive enterprises, but when it came to the question of supporting a competent system of free public schools, they balked dishearteningly. In the ante-bellum era, of course, society was somewhat divided, some affecting aristocracy and the larger part belonging to the "common peepul," but, even at that, the men who had the money dominated the public expenditures almost completely. And they suffered from the "cui bono" complex and proclaimed that "the fellow who cannot educate his own brains shouldn't have any." It was not a unique attitude then and is not today in some issues of social and economic life. Anyhow, no more was done for public education than public safety and morals demanded.

After the so-called civil war and the recovery in a degree of white supremacy, another obstruction to educational liberality was met. The negroes had been freed and enfranchised. The southern people were facing the menaces of civil rights bills, and force bills that threatened social and political equality of the negroes at the point of the bayonet. Elsewhere in southern communities negro children had been put into public schools with the white children. This writer himself had to leave a public school on that account and enter a Roman Catholic parish school into which negro pupils could not be forced. Naturally, in such circumstances, there was no desire by the white southern people to set up free public schools, with the almost surety that they would be made co-racial and intolerable by their children.

Atlanta recovered quickly in many ways from the war-ruin visited upon her, but her public school interests were among the slowest to revive. There came into the post-bellum citizenship men of faith and courage who knew that abnormal conditions could not granitize and better times were coming. They wanted good schools for their children and an enlightened constituency for the resurrected city.

In the early '70s they legislated for as complete a system of ward schools as the resources of the city could support. The result was the speedy building of the Marietta street, Ivy street, Fair street, Crew street and Walker street schools. They were equipped up-to-date and supplied with principals and teachers of superiod qualifications.

The board of education, constituted by the city council, was made up of the best men of the city. It put the system under a superintendent, Professor Bernard Mallon, an Irishman of the finest scholarship, diplomatic tact and executive ability. No one not personally acquainted with the devotion he brought to his arduous duties could properly evaluate the work he did to organize and give consistency to the public schools of this city. It was so effective as to cause admiration and emulation throughout the state, and even beyond its borders.

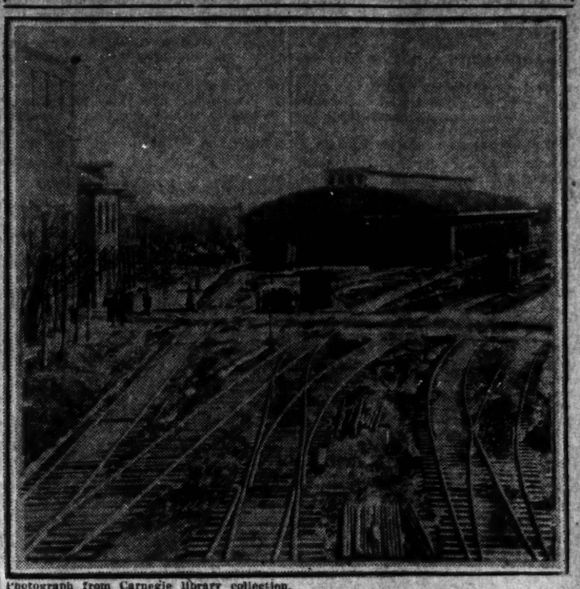
High schools for boys and girls were established, with Major W. F. Slaton, of precious memory, at the head of the former, and Miss Laura Haygood, who afterwards became a missionary educator and martyr in China, at the head of the latter. These three formed a trinity of educational leaders to whom the people of Atlanta owe a never-extinguishable debt of honor and gratitude.

In this preliminary sketch of the rise of the public school system in Atlanta, it is proper and timely to also recall that in those earlier times of the community classical and professional education were prominent in the scheme of city progress.

Oglethorpe college, founded by the Presbyterians in 1835, had been removed to Atlanta and had at its head Rev. Dr. David Wills, a divine and educator of fairly national repute. He afterwards served, during the war, a pastorate in Macon and after the war became a noted chaplain in the United States army.

The physicians of Atlanta, taking advantage of the city's central position and growing importance, organized, in 1855, the Atlanta Medical college and gave it high character and fame. The building, in the war-holocaust, was saved from the flames by a quick-witted strategem of Dr. D'Alvigney, hereafter to be related.

The Union Station Before the War



Photograph from Carnegie library collection.

The only thing in Atlanta that has not improved much since then. This old union station was burned in the Sherman war conflagration in 1864 and it was replaced shortly after the civil war by the present union station, which is not much of an improvement on the old one.

In the foreground to the left are the tracks of the Western & Atlantic railroad and to the right those of the Atlanta & West Point railroad The Georgia railroad entered the Union station, as now, from the other side. The street crossing in this picture is where the Whitehall street viaduct now spans the railroad tracks. The three-story building to the left is the present site of the Arcade building at the beginning of Peachtree. Across the street is the building then occupied by the Georgia Railroad bank, now the location of the Peters building, and just beyond that is the old Joseph Thompson Atlanta inn—the city's first hotel—on which site now stands the Kimball house.

HOW WHITEHALL STREET WAS NAMED.

The Constitution is in receipt of interesting information from Mrs. W. R. Story, of East Lake drive, concerning the naming of Whitehall street.

J. R. D. Ozburn, father of Mrs. Story, who conducted in the fifties a clothing store on Whitehall street between Hunter and Alabama, on the site of the building now occupied by the Kress store, purchased from Charner Humphries a ten-acre block of property in what is now the Lee, Park, Murphy and Gordon street section of West End. He erected a splendid home on this property, naming it Whitehall. In due course of time, the road from this handsome home to the center of the city became known as Whitehall street.

Mr. Ozburn died many years ago, and his only survivors are Mrs. Story and another daughter, Mrs. J. T. Goodrum, of New York city.

ALABAMA STREET SHOWN IN PICTURE SAYS L. C. BUTLER

Alabama street, from Whitehall, looking towards Pryor and Central avenue, was the scene shown in the civil war picture published in Friday's Constitution, according to L. C. Butler, who was a boy of eleven years of age at the time Sherman destroyed the city.

Mr. Butler, who lived with his widowed mother on the third floor of the building on the site now occupied by the Connally building, declares his conviction that Alabama is the street shown in the picture, but is of the opinion that the soldiers shown in the picture are not federals, but are Confederates.

"I know this to be true," said Mr. Butler Friday while on a visit to the editorial rooms of The Constitution," "because my mother and I were driven out of the three story building which occupies the site of the present Connally building when the structure was destroyed by fire several days before Sherman entered the city. It was the common belief at that time that the building had been set on fire by spies sent into the city for this purpose by General Sherman so that the federals could better bombard the business section of the city.

"The little building directly behind the building in which we lived is undoubtedly the building erected by General Austell and which later housed the Atlanta National bank. I do not recall the large three-story building just beyond that, but further on down in the same block is to be seen the Chastain hotel.

"In the background of the photograph is clearly to be seen the old round-house which stood at the foot of Alabama street, and the street in the picture curves to the right just as Alabama did in entering Loyd street, now Central avenue.

"I am convinced that this is Alabama street, even though the Georgia railroad building cannot be seen in the picture. Just why this is so I do not know, and it seems strange that the old Cupelo building, still standing, does not show up in the photograph."

Mr. Butler lives at 79 Norwood street, Atlanta, and during the years between 1870 and 1873 was a pressman on The Constitution. Later he moved to Cedartown but has returned to Atlanta to make his home.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

PROFESSOR WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

In a chapter on Man and the Microbe in an elementary school textbook called "Healthy Living," Charles Edward Amory Winslow, doctor of public health, professor of public health in Yale medical school, gets in a little over his head in an attempt to explain a matter of pathology, and succeeds in confusing the pupil. It is apparent that the professor does not know precisely what infection means. He should have sought enlightenment about that from a doctor—a real doctor, a physician, a real physician, a doctor of medicine—there are so many legitimate and illegitimate "doctors" doing their stuff these days that one must specify doctor of medicine if that is what he means.

Says Professor Winslow:

"Some microbes may multiply in the nose and throat or in the intestines without doing any harm. The disease germs, however, form poisons called toxins, which are absorbed into the blood and cause the dull feeling, headache and other symptoms of sickness."

Where the erudite doctor of public health picks up such a quaint notion I can scarcely imagine, unless perhaps he found it in an old almanac or the back pages of a movie magazine. Certainly there is no scientific basis for any such absurd assumption, and it is a shame that such balderdash should be taught school children in the name of "Health."

Inspired with the fluent flow of original thought, the professor pours out another dose of his soothing syrup:

"Most disease germs do more than this. They find their way through the walls of the nose or throat or alimentary canal, for instance, into the blood stream itself, and grow and multiply in the blood or in the organs of the body."

Now that is infection. Not until the germs have penetrated or invaded the tissues has infection occurred. Not until infection has occurred does the individual experience any symptoms of sickness. Infection and infectious disease are not synonymous terms. Disease germs may enter the nose or throat or the stomach or intestine, but they never cause any "dull feeling or headache or other symptoms of sickness" as long as they remain there. This is no mere technical distinction, but one of the greatest practical importance, and the teacher who fails to make his distinction clear, when he attempts to impart to pupils a fair knowledge of germ diseases for their own welfare, does wrong to attempt to deal with a subject beyond his depth.

The doctor of public health next discusses "The Common Cold as a Type of Communicable Disease," and gets off the same old buncombe about exposure, of course, but let him ball it up in his own words:

"There are three or four kinds of germs that cause colds. Whenever any one 'catches a cold' it is because some of these germs have entered his nose or throat and begun to grow there."

That is putting it very mildly indeed. But now for the baloney:

"A cold often begins just after one has been chilled, or has had wet feet. . . ."

Will the reader kindly insert a few cuss-words here and assume that I said 'em—about the inevitable wet feet—

". . . or has become overtired. The healthy body can defend itself against the germs of a cold, and such germs may be present in the nose and throat a long time without causing any trouble."

That last assertion is true. Of course the healthy body or the natural defenses against germs have nothing to do with that. The natural defenses come into action only after the germs have invaded the tissues, never when they are merely sojourning in the cavity of nose or throat. Any real doctor could have explained that to the prolific professor—this textbook I'm enjoying is only one of a series by the same author. And now let the professor speak his last line and retire:

"But after a chill the body is weakened so that microbes (lurking, you understand, in the nose or throat) begin to grow and the real cold develops."

This here now real cold being, obviously, different from the hypothetical or imginary cold, or something like that.

Anyway, won't the school children be the wisecres when they have conned their "Healthy Living" lessons thoroughly:

Cotton Conference Adjourns Without Shaping Measure

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—The special cotton conference composed of a senator and representative from each cotton-growing state today discussed proposals for cotton legislation at this session of congress, but adjourned until after the holidays without reaching conclusions.

The committee is composed of Senator Smith, South Carolina, chairman; Senator Harris, Georgia; Representatives Jewell, Louisiana; Rankin, Mississippi, and Fulmer, South Carolina.

The conference agreed to give particular attention to methods for approving the government crop reports and to determine if a change in the personnel of the crop reporting board should be recommended.

Enthusiasm Over Widening Of Edgewood Is Expressed By Owners of Property

Council Members Pledge Aid To Improvement Association; Widening Move Protested.

Enthusiasm ran high at a luncheon of the Central Improvement association at the Hotel Ansley Friday looking toward a concerted effort to induce the finance committee of city council to provide for widening Edgewood avenue from North Boulevard to Hurt street as one of the chief items of the city's 1926 improvement program.

Acting upon suggestion of Councilman John A. White, chairman of the streets committee, members of the association resolved to start at once circulation of a petition among property owners obtaining their consent to give the city sufficient of their sidewalks and property to permit the program of widening Edgewood eight feet on either side. Brown Hayes, secretary of the association, said a majority of property owners had already given their oral consent.

Subsequent to the action of the Central Improvement association, a delegation of property owners on Edgewood avenue appeared before the streets committee to voice protest over the proposed widening.

"We don't want the street widened," said M. E. Benson, one of the delegation. Members of the delegation made the assertion that a majority of property owners were opposed to the plan.

Mrs. Ed Pierce, ninth ward civic leader, presided at the luncheon of the Central Improvement association. Members of the fourth and ninth ward council delegations and Alderman W. B. DuVall, chairman of the finance committee, were honor guests.

Alderman DuVall informed the members it would be almost impossible to put through an appropriation for the project this year because of the fact that revenues collected from the general tax this year fell $147,000 below the amount anticipated. For that reason, he said, all apportionments heretofore made and not expended are being held up.

Councilman D. Knight and Councilman Horace Russell pledged their active support to the project for next year. Councilman White and Alderman Claude L. Ashley expressed belief that before any action was taken a petition bearing names of property owners owning more than 50 per cent of the frontage waiving any damages and offering to give sufficient of their property should be filed in legal form.

Orme street property owners appeared before the streets committee to request action that would make that street of uniform width, 70 feet. They also asked that the street be leveled at the intersections at North avenue and Merritts avenue. The matter was ordered referred to the sixth ward council delegation.

Paving Is Awarded.

The committee recommended that Angier Springs road, leading to the site purchased by Sears-Roebuck & Co. for its southeastern distributing point, be closed. The decision to extend North avenue will relieve property owners on Angier road of any inconveniences as to ingress or egress, it was pointed out.

The committee recommended awards for paving of five more streets. Avondale avenue, from Confederate to Hampton, embracing 1,993 square yards, and Sims street from Rockwell to Mary, 2,189 square yards, were awarded Nichols Contracting company, the lowest bidder. Vibro concrete is to be used on both streets, and the bid in both instances was $2.24 a square yard.

The chief of construction was authorized to proceed with work on three other streets. They were Blue Ridge avenue, from Highland to Moreland, 2,573 square yards, asphalt; Kalb street, from North Boulevard DeKalb to a point west of the city stockade, 3,555 square yards, asphalt, and Berean avenue, from Glenwood to East Fair, 4,121 square yards, concrete.

Resolutions were adopted requesting the Fulton commissioners to continue paving West Tenth street from Williams to State street. The street already has been paved with concrete from West Peachtree to Williams.

Christmas Carols Will Be Featured In Pre-Yuletide Program at Haverty's

Photograph by J. T. Holloway, staff photographer.

Standing, left to right, Mary Florence Greenwood, Joyce Robinson, Mary Powell, Geraldine Donnally, Hattie Clyde Carlton, Vivian Bonner, Henrietta Harris, Agnes Pitts, Louise Donohue, Elizabeth Jones and Genevieve Kellogg. Front row, sitting, Ruth Chandler, Dorothy Cathcart, Kathleen Loveless, Gene Robinson and Lavini McWhorter. Center, Evelyn Mathews, Mrs. J. C. Brown and Caroline Dobbs.

Christmas carols sung in a big business house on Saturday night preceding Christmas at the height of the holiday rush is the latest yuletide innovation to be presented in Atlanta.

High above the raucous notes of tin horns, above the cries of "mamma dolls" above the screech of baby rattles, tin whistles and rubber balloons, the clear, rich tones of children's voices singing a full list of Christmas carols will be heard at Haverty's furniture store at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

Twenty little girls from grammar schools and junior high schools who have been taught a complete program of carols by Mrs. J. C. Brown, director of the choir of the Second Baptist church, will sing the carols in a program which will last for more than one hour.

While thousands of busy shoppers crowd the store to select gifts, carolers will sing the joyous songs of the yuletide season. Mrs. Brown has been working with the children for several weeks and they have perfected a program which includes all the most popular carols sung during the holidays. They were specially engaged by Haverty's to sing their program during the height of the Christmas trade rush Saturday night.

In the Haverty store a special platform has been erected for the singers which has been prettily decorated with Christmas greens of all kinds. Children will stand on this platform which is located in the middle of the store and will sing their program which will begin with the famous Veni Emmanuel song and which will conclude with the most popular of all carols, "Holy Night."

The girls range from 9 to 12 years old and have been selected for the chorus because of the sweetness of their voices.

This is believed to be the first time a complete program of Christmas carols has been offered by a business house as one of the special features of its Christmas trade program.

The little girls sing with remarkable power and their voices blend in beautiful harmony in the many pretty carols included on the program. The concert will be presented on the main floor where the platform has been erected and it can be heard clearly in all sections of the main floor of the building.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL OPENED TO PUBLIC

The new Fulton County High school, located on the site of the home of Joseph E. Brown, governor of Georgia during the civil war, was formally opened with exercises held in the large auditorium Friday, the closing day of the fall term of Fulton county schools.

Hundreds of visitors inspected the spacious new plant for an hour before the program opened at 11 o'clock Friday morning. Work in the new structure will begin January 4, at which time county schools will begin the winter term.

W. F. Dykes, principal of the school, presided at the ceremonies. He presented as speakers J. W. Simmons, former superintendent of Fulton county schools; Arthur Wrigley, president of the county board of education; Virlyn B. Moore, chairman of the county commissioners; Joseph W Humphries, oldest member of the board of education in point of service and former president of that body; Fort E. Land, state school superintendent, and George M. Napier, attorney general.

Thomas W. Connally, grandson of Governor Brown, delivered an address in behalf of the Brown family, telling of the pleasure its members experienced in the fact that the old home site should be dedicated to the youth of Fulton county.

Mr. Humphries spoke of the history of the site, telling of its many owners since it was obtained from the Creek Indians by the United States in 1821.

Musical selections were offered by the Fulton High school R. O. T. C. band, and Gladstone Preston, a student, played a piano number. The hall was decorated in red and white colors of the school and with palms, poinsettias and red roses.

4 DOOMED BOYS LOSE COURT PLEA

Unless Governor Clifford Walker interferes with the verdict of courts four young white men will be executed in Georgia within a short time under decisions by the supreme court. In a decision Friday the supreme court upheld death sentences imposed last spring in Putnam circuit court on Ted Coggeshall and F. W. McClelland, charged with killing Professor W. C. Wright, Putnam county superintendent of education. The supreme court also has denied a petition for a new trial filed in behalf of Willie Jones and Gervis Bloodworth, Taylor county boys under death sentence on a charge of killing Howard F. Underwood, a traveling salesman.

The supreme court Friday declined to grant Coggeshall and McClelland a re-hearing on appeals for new trials. These boys will be re-sentenced as soon as the remittitur is returned to the Putnam circuit court. They were sentenced to death in the electric chair.

$25,000 IS ASKED FOR AUTO INJURIES

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gilmer Friday filed two suits in Fulton superior court asking damages amounting to $35,000 of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Arnold for injuries said to have been inflicted on Mrs. Gilmer in an automobile accident on November 27 at Peachtree street and Auburn avenue.

According to allegation of the petition, Mrs. Gilmer was preparing to board a street car, when a machine driven by Mrs. Arnold struck her, knocking her down and injuring her seriously. The car was the property of Arnold, the complainant avers, and he also is named in the suit.

Mrs. Gilmer seeks $25,000 for her injuries and the husband asks $10,000 for loss of his wife's service and hospital and medical bills.

FINED, SENTENCED ON LIQUOR CHARGE

G. A. Hafer was fined $250 and given a 12 months' term in jail Friday following conviction in Judge F. D. Thomas' division of Fulton superior court on charges of possessing liquor and violating the prohibition laws. The jail sentence was suspended when Hafer paid the fine.

Hafer denied the charges but officers testified they found 21 half pint bottles and two pint bottle of the contraband, which, they said, was the property of Hafer.

SOAKS RIGHT IN AND LIMBERS UP STIFF JOINTS

Pharmacists Call It "Joint-Ease" Because It's For Swollen, Sore, Painful, Creaky Joints Only.

It took a good many years to get together a combination of pain subduing and swelling reducing agents declared to be the one remedy that almost instantly penetrates through skin and flesh and starts right in to make swollen, inflamed, creaky, pain racked joints as good as new.

They call this new and wonderful preparation "Joint Ease" because the medical man who turned the trick, worked for years to perfect some low-priced remedy that would really benefit the millions of people who have one or more joints that need helpful attention.

So "Joint Ease" is prepared only for people who have a swollen, painful, creaky, distorted or stiff joint, whether it be in knee, elbow, shoulder, ankle, neck or finger and whether it is caused by rheumatism or something else.

Of course, it can't help but quickly put an end to such superficial ailments as lumbago, neuralgia, neuritis, aching muscles, stitch in the side, crick in the neck or sore feet because of its penetrating action, but what it is really recommended for is joint ailments of any nature whatever.

Ask for a tube of "Joint Ease." You can use it several times in one evening for quick results, because it goes right through the skin with only a few seconds rubbing. It surely is a swift penetrator and when it gets under the skin, it starts right in to clean up all joint trouble.

Jacobs' pharmacy dispenses it daily for about 60 cents a tube, as do first class druggists everywhere.—(adv.)

PRISON COMMISSION RULES ARE QUOTED

Rules of the state prison commission governing the conduct of inmates of the state penitentiary adopted during the administration of Governor Thomas W. Hardwick and approved by him do not give the county convict wardens authority to inflict cruel or inhumane punishment on unruly prisoners, according to Judge R. E. Davison, chairman of the state prison commission.

The special rules prescribing the duties of wardens were adopted to supplant paragraphs three and four of rule 12 in the old code which permitted wardens to whip convicts under certain condition and outlined these conditions.

The rule now in force which is the only rule of any kind prescribed for the conduct of wardens is as follows:

"They shall safely keep all prisoners committed to their custody, rigidly enforce discipline by the use of such humane modes of punishment as will best enforce submission to authority and compel and induce the performance of good and faithful labor during work hours, such as solitary confinement, restriction of diet, restriction of privilege of receiving visitors, and other privileges usually accorded first-class prisoners, strictly enforcing grade rules and good conduct account; the use of shackles and striped clothing; fastening them in such a way as will cause them to be restricted in their movements, or such other mode of punishment as the warden may be compelled to use which is not unusual or cruel in its nature."

Lover's Last Chance To Secure License For Xmas Wedding

Today is the last on which applications for marriage licenses may be filed in order to secure licenses in time for Christmas, it was announced Friday by attaches of the ordinary's office.

Last year several persons were compelled to postpone ceremonies on account of failure to comply with Georgia marriage laws which require that persons wishing to be married file applications with the ordinary five days before the marriage.

All offices of Fulton county will close December 24 and remain closed until the following Monday, according to a ruling of Fulton county commissioners.

White couples filing applications for marriage licenses Friday were: William Bonnor Knight, 24, and Miss Effie Chesnut, 21; John W. Laney, 24, and Miss Alice McCoy, 18; Claude A. Eason, 20, and Etta Drummond, 21; Clarence L. Drake, 19, and Miss Annie Belle Cowan; Roy C. Hutchinson, 19, and Mrs. Beulah Echols, 23, and Alonzo Stone, 31, and Mrs. Virginia Wheeler, 30.

OVER 28 MILES PAVED IN ATLANTA IN 1925

More than 28 miles of streets were paved in Atlanta during 1925 at a total cost of $1,069,523.44, according to announcement made to the streets committee of city council Friday afternoon by William A. Hansell, chief of construction.

The streets committee, through its chairman, Councilman John A. White, and Mayor Sims declared this strengthened Atlanta's claims to distinction as one of the leading cities with regard to street paving.

One hundred and twenty-one streets, the majority in residential sections, were paved during the last 12 months, Chief Hansell announced. Of this number 77 were paved with concrete and 44 with asphalt.

Practically 85 per cent of the total mileage of streets paved this year were financed under the so-called "baby bond" plan or the ten-year street improvement plan, under which property owners and the street railway company bore entire expenses. The others were financed under the assessment ordinance of 1912 under which the city pays one-third of the cost and the abutting property owners the remainder.

The total miles of streets paved with asphalt was 15.565, while the 12.509 miles were paved with concrete. The total cost of concrete streets was $597,978.65; the cost of asphalt streets, $471,544.79.

Crazed Killer Is Found Dead In Plot of Woods

Pine Bluff, Ark., December 18.—(AP)—S. A. McAdams, Sulphur Springs farmer, who late yesterday ran amuck, beat his wife to death, fatally wounded J. D. Helton, an aged farmer, and slightly wounded three other persons, was found dead today in a clump of woods a short distance from the Helton home.

A posse which searched through the greater part of last night for McAdams, a former inmate of the state asylum for the insane, located his body shortly after daybreak when they followed a small dog owned by McAdams to a secluded spot in the woods. The dog was covered with frost, and apparently had kept vigil through the night over the man's body. Before going into the woods McAdams shot and killed another of his dogs, a hunting dog.

Part of McAdams' head was torn away by a charge of shot, fired by the crazed man apparently by placing the barrel of a shotgun against his face and forcing down the trigger.

Officers believe McAdams beat his wife to death shortly after his return with her and their children from a Christmas shopping expedition to Pine Bluff. The woman's face was crushed and her throat and chest slashed. After killing his wife McAdams went to the Helton home carrying his 5-months-old child, handed the infant to Mrs. Helton and shot Helton to death. Leaving the Helton home McAdams disarmed two youths he encountered in a roadway returning from a hunting trip, fired three shots at them and made his way into the woods where his body was located today. The youths were sprinkled with small shot, but not seriously wounded.

After killing his wife the crazed man apparently set fire to her clothing. When officers reached the McAdams home the woman's clothing still was smouldering and her chest and arms were badly burned.

$3,460 IS RAISED IN CHEST DRIVE

Community Chest telephoners Friday obtained $3,460, the best day's work since the campaign was started last Tuesday. The total is now $11,730 for the four days drive campaign.

W. R. (Cap) Joyner shattered all records for an hour and a half span when he obtained 15 subscriptions totaling $350 and maintained his lead over all workers with a total of 44 subscriptions for the four days.

However, W. B. Farnsworth, of the Georgia Railway and Power company leads for the day with $386 and Walter Scott, of the Todelo Scales company, added $339 to his total. E. Stevens is tied with Farnsworth in number of subscriptions to date, both having obtained 39. Other high records for the four days include Scott 31, John A. Brice 24, J. W. Carswell 22, J. T. Hancock 18.

Several new fast comers joined the ranks Friday. These included Albert Ryhne who obtained 17 subscriptions, W. Dunlap 17, E. D. Underwood 15, E. A. Kneisel 10, D. R. Jamieson 7, S. Lithicum 10 and H. P. Thomas 6. Thirty men participated in the work during the day and a night shift was busy several hours, calling up people who could not be located during the day.

Chairman Joe Reed declares that he will bring the total to $40,000 by Christmas eve if he can keep a live bunch at the telephones.

The latest acquisition to Mr. Reed's forces is Samuel Rothberg, manager of J. Froshin and company. Mr. Rothberg called headquarters Friday and said that he had just returned from New York, and while away from the city had been in a train wreck, receiving injuries which though not serious had confined him to his bed. "I have a telephone here by my side and I am ready to do what I can to aid the Community Chest," he said. Mr. Rothberg was immediately supplied with a list, and his first report will be handed ni today. Persons who cannot work during the day are invited to join the night force, reporting at 6 o'clock at campaign headquarters.

SECRETARY DAVIS TO VISIT GEORGIA ON ARMY BUSINESS

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—Secretary Davis will leave tomorrow on an inspection trip of war department holdings, which may keep him away from Washington until after the holidays. His itinerary has not been definitely mapped out, but he will inspect particularly tracts in Georgia and Florida which might be disposed of advantageously.

The war secretary regards the army housing problem as the most serious situation he has to deal with. His view was reflected in the president's message to congress, which urged that the proposal to make available funds derived from the sale of surplus war department realty holdings for the purpose of constructing permanent quarters for the army be enacted into law.

He made this announcement today following a conference in the office of Attorney General Dan Moody. The conference followed Satterwhite's appearance of more than an hour before the Travis county grand jury which is investigating alleged irregularities in conduct of the state highway department.

Insull Sought As Electrical Head of Britain

Chicago, December 18.—(AP)—Samuel Insull, who was a poor boy in London, like Dick Whittington, is sought to go back home to become the electrical premier.

Mr. Insull, who has attained international note in the electrical field, is urged by Lord Rothermere, in a signed article in the London Daily Mail, as the logical man to assist Great Britain in the adoption of the central electric power idea, which Lord Rothermere advocates.

As an office boy, Mr. Insull began work for a London firm at five shillings a week—about $1.25 in American money. He walked several miles a day to and from home, but found time to study shorthand and after two years became private secretary to Thomas Gibson Bowes, a prominent journalist.

At the age of 19, he was employed in the house of commons and after that became private secretary to Thomas A. Edison, and began his climb to fortune in the United States.

He came to Chicago in 1892. Today he is president of the Commonwealth Edison company and heads the People's Gas, Light and Coal company, the Chicago Rapid Transit Elevated lines, the South Shore Electric line and various other public utility concerns.

PROTEST INCREASE IN TAX ASSESSMENTS

Resolutions requesting the mayor and council to abstain from any further increase in tax assessments or in the tax rate because of the damaging effect it would have on business, industrial and economc conditions have been adopted by the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association and the Atlanta Automobile association and have been forwarded to council for consideration Monday.

It was added that additional increases would have the effect of deterring many concerns from locating in Atlanta but also cause many others already located here to curb their activities in some way to overcome the disadvantage. The general real estate market would be seriously affected, it was also declared.

YAARAB NOBLES READY FOR BIG CEREMONIAL

Nobles of Yaarab Temple will gather in the Atlanta Auditorium tonight for the last ceremonial session of the year and from every section of the Desert of North Georgia they will come to mingle with brethren who live in the Oasis of Atlanta and participate in events to celebrate Yaarab's achievement in raising $1,000,000 to build a magnificent mosque.

Illustrious Potentate Charles A. Bowen and his aides have been at work for some weeks preparing for the monster ceremonial, which will open with a spectacular display by the band, patrol, chanters, Oriental band, team and all of the various committees that assist in carrying out the work of the Shrine in this Oasis.

Members of the "victory class" will report to Recorder Argard in Taft hall at 6:30 o'clock, and at the same hour the banquet committee will begin serving a buffet luncheon in another section of Taft hall. Yaarab's band will play a concert beginning at 7:30 o'clock and promptly at 8 o'clock the potentate divan, past potentates and committeemen will make their entry under escort of the five organizations of the temple.

West End Churches Organize Christian Athletic Association

A meeting of the Christian Athletic association, composed of five churches in West End, will be held at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night at West End Baptist church. All churches in West End, Capitol View and West End Park have been invited to join the organization and all boys who are members of Sunday schools in that section are eligible.

The association was formed at a meeting held last Tuesday night at West End Baptist church with the West End Baptist, West End Christian, West End Presbyterian, Gordon Street Baptist and Capitol View Baptist churches as members. Officers elected were Lonnie De Loach, West End Baptist, president; Lester Lane, Gordon Street Baptist, vice president; Furman White, Capitol View Baptist, secretary; Cliff Harwell, West End Christian, treasurer, and Tom Jennings, West End Baptist, scribe.

Six cables are to be strung across a span of 6,240 feet, or nearly a mile and a quarter, to carry power across an arm of Puget sound into the city of Tacoma.

EMORY LATE CLASSES SHOW BIG INCREASE

Emory university's afternoon and night classes at the Extension building, Spring and Baker streets, and at various Atlanta public schools, are to be increased greatly during the quarter beginning January 5, according to Dr. Ralph E. Wager, director of extension work.

A total of 37 courses, embracing virtually every phase of the university curriculum, will be offered.

All of the courses carry university credit and can be credited toward a degree where the candidate meets the regular entrance requirements.

The night classes at Spring and Baker streets meet twice weekly for one or two hours, according to the value of the course. The afternoon classes, which are composed largely of teachers but which are open to others, are scheduled to suit the students.

Emory now has more than 300 students in the extension classes, according to Dr. Wager.

KAPLAN RETAINS TITLE BY DECISION OVER HERMAN

Featherweight King Gets Verdict in Eleven Rounds; Two Are Declared Even

New York, December 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—The world's featherweight crown still rests jauntily on the head of Louis (Kid) Kaplan, Connecticut's idol of the ring. He successfully defended his title tonight by battering his way to a convincing 15-round victory over one of his foremost and most persistent challengers, Babe Herman, of California.

Before a crowd of 14,000 fans in the new Madison Square Garden, Kaplan spiked Herman's attack almost completely as well as any suspicion that his hold on the 126-pound crown was slipping a bit. The Kid belied his somewhat drawn appearance by setting a slashing pace from start to finish, driving Herman to cover with a swarming, aggressive onslaught and piling up a margin which left no doubt of his triumph in the minds of observers.

It was a slugging, mauling battle from start to finish, but except for a few flashes, it lacked the color and spectacular exchanges that featured the six previous encounters between these consistent rivals. Kaplan's furious attempts at offensive kept Herman in retreat and resulted in continual holding by the challenger, who failed to show any effectiveness in attack himself except in the tenth and fourteenth rounds.

These two rounds were the only ones credited to Herman and, while he staggered the champion a bit in both with solid rights to the chin, he succeeded only in temporarily checking the Kid's swarming drives.

Two Rounds Even.

Herman held the champion even in two other rounds, the third and fourth, but in the remaining eleven the Connecticut "Buzz Saw" had his rival backing away from a steady hammering to the head and body.

There were no knockdowns, in spite of the vicious swings indulged in by both battlers, but Herman took two acrobatic plunges to the canvas, once in the tenth round when he stumbled and turned a back flip, and again in the final round when he bounded to the floor and up again after dodging a Kaplan swing. Kaplan's shiftiness and Herman swinging wildly throughout the first half of the fight at such times as they were not locked in clinches and in the latter half the champion had sufficient stamina in reserve to check his rival's belated attempts to rally.

Honors were fairly closely divided in the last six rounds, despite the fact that Kaplan carried off four of them. Both flung caution to the winds in frequent and wild exchanges but the Kid, even when stung by rights to the head, nearly always came back to square accounts or take the edge again.

Both Battlers Stained.

Both showed marks of battle as they wound up the final round in a slashing exchange, Herman bleeding from cuts over his right eye and around the mouth, while Kaplan's cauliflower ear bled freely in addition to which the champion's ribs showed some of the efforts of Herman's pounding at close range.

Dick "Honey Boy" Finnegan won the semi-final bout on a foul from Bobby Garcia, soldier boxer from Camp Holabird, Md., in the sixth round of a slashing ten-round go. Garcia was disqualified by Referee Kid McPartland for hitting low after being warned three times.

Bantamweights clashed in two four-round preliminaries, with Nick Quagerelli, of New York, 126, gaining the judges' decision over Tommy Jones, of Atlanta, 125, after which Johnny Filucci, of New York, 124 1-2, won the verdict over Willie Makel, Washington negro, 126.

Jackie Snyder, of New York, 126 1-2, captured a close decision over Jimmy Sakamoto, of Japan, 128, in a six-round encounter.

YANKEE BOSS TO CHANGE LINEUP

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 17.—(AP)—Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, stopped in Cincinnati, his home town, today while en route to Florida.

Huggins said he plans to have some new faces in the Yankee line-up next season.

"Baseball needs an occasional change of scenery and there are going to be several changes in the personnel of my team," he said. The Yankee manager mentioned Second Baseman Ward as one player who will figure in a trade, although he was unable to say what the deal will bring.

Huggins said that Babe Ruth was keeping himself in the best of trim this winter and that he is looking to the Babe for a big season.

"Ruth probably will never reach the pinnacle he attained in the past but even though he doesn't he still will be a great star and one of the big attractions of the game," the Yankee manager asserted.

MAURER PUT ON PRO TEAM

Jacksonville, Fla., December 18.—(AP)—The possibility is that Jack B. Sack, former University of Pittsburgh star tackle and all-American tackle 1923, will appear with the all-star Jacksonville football team on January 2, when that team with Ernie Nevers, Leland Stanford star, making his debut as a professional football player, meets the "Red" Grange Chicago Bears. Should Sack appear it will make the eighth all-American in the game's lineup.

The probable lineup of the Jacksonville team is:

Ends—Fincher (Georgia Tech), Lawson (Leland Stanford) and Thomas (Washington and Lee).

Tackles—R. Stein (Washington and Jefferson), Carpenter (Georgia Tech) and Williams (Florida).

Guards—Godwin (Georgia Tech), Wesley (Alabama) and Sack (Pitts).

Centers—Phillips (Georgia Tech) and H. Stein (Pitts).

Quarterbacks — Warren (West Point) and Gebrke (Harvard).

Halves—Duncan (Florida), Barron (Georgia Tech), Maurer (Oglethorpe) and Shirey (Auburn).

Fullback—Nevers (Leland Stanford).

ROCKNE GIVES OUT FINAL STATEMENT

South Bend, Ind., December 18.—(AP)—Knute K. Rockne, director of athletics at Notre Dame university, will remain at Notre Dame. This is indicated in a statement issued this afternoon by the famous football coach.

The statement is expected to be the final word so far as Notre Dame and Rockne are concerned, in the controversy which arose last week after James R. Knapp, athletic official at Columbia university, had announced that Rockne had signed a contract to coach at the New York institution.

Rockne said his purpose in issuing the statement was "to express the deep regret I feel at having caused any embarrassment to the University of Notre Dame, and to pledge anew my loyalty to a school that has treated me in a manner that will put me under lasting obligations."

Rockne added that he had at no time any intention of leaving Notre Dame.

Mathewson Called Game's Most Perfect Pitcher

Matty Was Best Equipped Pitcher in Major Leagues; Control Biggest Asset

(Following is the sixteenth article of a series entitled "Rounding Third," by Hughie Jennings, on his 34 years of major league baseball service. Jennings, discoverer of Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach, and central figure in some of baseball's biggest developments, writes an interesting history of the national game in this series. He also analyzes the greatest figures of baseball during the last 34 years.)

BY HUGH A. JENNINGS.

CHAPTER 16

It is impossible to say what pitcher was the greatest of all time. There were many pitchers that can be described as great. Offhand, I may mention Amos Rusie, Jouett Meekin, Christy Mathewson, Joe McGinnity, Charles Radbourne, Walter Johnson, Denton T. Young, "Sadie" McMahon, A. G. Spalding, Jack Chesbro, Mordecai Brown, "Kid" Nichols, "Rube" Waddell, "Chief" Bender, Bill Donovan, Addie Joss, Grover Cleveland Alexander, Urban Shocker, Matty Kilroy and Eddie Plank.

There were a few others, but these stand out clearly in memory. Some of them were better than others, but to set apart one and say he was the best of all time is beyond me.

If you ask me to name the best equipped pitcher of all time I can accommodate you. This was Christy Mathewson. He came closer to being the perfect pitcher than any man that has thrown a ball over the plate. Mathewson is the pitcher's pitcher, the one man they try to model after. He had everything that a pitcher should have—a curve ball, a slow one, a fast one, a fadeaway. He pitched with little effort and he had the greatest gift a pitcher can possess—control. Mathewson's control was near perfect. He had the needed intelligence and the heart; he studied his batsmen and knew their weaknesses; he always pitched to them. Every time Mathewson started a ball for the plate it meant something. He was never found wanting when the test came.

A Pair of Aces.

The greatest pair of pitchers that were ever found on the same staff were Amos Rusie and Jouett Meekin. Having this pair was like having two Walter Johnsons in Johnson's prime. Both were big—Rusie stood more than six feet in height and weighed about 215; Meekin was one inch taller than Rusie and weighed 15 pounds less. Rusie had as much speed as Johnson and a better curve ball. His curve broke very fast; it was about as fast as the average fast ball, and a cross between a wide curve and a drop ball. Its success lay in the quick break. Meekin had about as much speed as Rusie, but his curve was not so good. It resembled Walter Johnson's curve ball.

Rusie was the most peculiar pitcher I have ever seen. With all his size and weight he had unusually short arms. They were no longer than the normal arms of a man 5 feet 8 inches in height. How he got such speed on the ball with those short arms of his was always a mystery to me, for all the great fast-ball pitchers, Johnson in particular, have long arms. Johnson got by on his fast ball alone for a long stretch, but Rusie could not have done this. What made Rusie's fast ball good was that fast-breaking curve ball. He owed his remarkable success to the curve. Unless you were looking for it, you could never hit the curve, because it broke too sharply.

Meekin was easier to hit than Rusie because his curve ball did not carry so much break and you could go after it like a fast ball. The way to hit Meekin was to make up your mind that everything he pitched was a fast ball.

They were an invaluable pair. With their size and their stuff they were able to work every other day. A manager who had Meekin and Rusie today could sweep through either major league with any one of the 16 teams.

Physique Great Aid.

Physique is a great aid to a pitcher. Practically all the great pitchers were big men, weighing 180 pounds or more. No other man every pitched so long as Denton Tecumseh Young, known as "Cy" through the baseball ages. He was a big man and he had an easy delivery, pitching with little effort. He had a good fast ball, but only a fair curve. In style and pitching stuff he much resembled Meekin, McMahon and Nichols. All four had good fast balls, but only average curve balls. All four pitched alike, overhand or sidearm. McMahon's curve ball was slightly better than the curve of the other three.

Charles Radbourne had a fast ball and a curve. There were better fast balls, but few better curves. He knew how to pitch and he knew how to field. Among the old-timers the fielding of Radbourne stood out. Any pitcher that opposed Providence while Radbourne was on the Providence pitching staff did not have a soft mark to shoot at when Radbourne came to bat, for he was the best hitting pitcher of his day.

When Matt Kilroy was pitching for Louisville and "Toad" Ramsey for Baltimore, each wanted to win the title of "Strikeout King." Both were left-handers and each had a drop curve, a delivery that broke down sharply and that was well suited for strikeout purposes. Whenever these two teams met, Kilroy and Ramsey were saved for the same day and a battle always resulted. Kilroy generally got the decision, although Ramsey frequently stuck out more men. Kilroy had the advantage in picking runners off bases. If they did get on, he would throw them out. He often purposely gave a batter a base on balls in preference to handing him a good one that he could hit. Kilroy knew his chance of catching the runner off base was much better than striking him out if the batter had him in a hole.

What Difference Do Uniforms Make?

They haven't issued uniforms at Joe Brown Junior High yet, but Coach Don Gorham is putting through an enthusiastic bunch of youngsters in preparation for the approaching basketball season. They'll have uniforms when the season opens and a good team, too, the coach declares.

YOUNG STRIBLING TO WED

: DECEMBER 26, BOXER'S BIRTHDAY, IS DATE SET :

MACON BELLE, RUMORS SAY

Macon, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—Miss Clara Kinney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Kinney, is home from Brenau college and according to reports considered reliable she is to become the bride on December 26 of W. L. (Young) Stribling. On that date Young Stribling will be 21 years of age. Young Stribling is here; his father and mother are in Miami, Fla., but will be here Monday.

No license has been applied for.

Mrs. Kinney says she has no knowledge of the expected marriage of the couple and believes that she would know. "I have heard the report," said Mrs. Kinney.

Young Stribling would not confirm the rumor this afternoon, but when a reporter sought to get him at the home of friends tonight, he was given the Kinneys' telephone number.

JOE BROWN HI ATHLETES BUSY

Each of the candidates of the Joe Brown Junior High school is hard at work trying to win a place on the squad and wear the maroon and white basketball jersey into battle for their school in the coming season.

They do not have any too much time in their preparation for the opening game with the Bass Junior High team on January 13. They are determined to win the first start and will devote a certain part of their holidays to practice for the occasion.

The team has two of last year's stars back to build around. Sellars played a guard position last year and with his experience will be able to help the team along in its struggle to the championship.

Toney was another of the last year's squad to return to the fold. Last year he was a substitute guard, but he has shown a pretty good eye for the basket and has been shifted to a forward position. He will be an aid to Coach Gorham.

New Material Plentiful.

The new material is making a good showing and after the first of the year will be rounded into a good team. At the pivot position Gatlin and Wheeler are having a fight to start the first game. Both of these boys look like they can produce the goods in every respect.

The guard position that will be left open for a candidate this year may fall to West. He is going good at the position and will give any boy a tussle for the station.

Walters and Howard are out for a try at one of their forward positions and are making a fine showing in their floor and foot work. They both have a good eye for the hoop and will ring up a number of points if the opposition is not careful. Howard was a member of the Rinky Dinks football team this year and he has shown that he has the ability as an athlete to come across in first-class style.

Coach Gorham, who coached the team last year, is again in charge of this sport and he has the ability to turn out a team that will be second to none in the Junior High league.

At present the squad consists of about 25 men, but he expects to cut it down in a few days to about 18 or 20. They are practicing on an outdoor court at the rear of the school when the weather permits. The jerseys have not been given out as yet and as soon as the squad is cut they will appear in the school colors.

Crimson Players Packing To Leave This Afternoon

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., December 18.—(Special.)—When evening rolls around Saturday all there will be left at the capstone will be "I-wish-I-were's" with the Tidesmen, wishing them the best of luck at Pasadena on New Year's day. The Tide leaves on the regular A. G. S. train at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and is going to get a big send-off at the hands of numerous Tuscaloosa friends.

The latest news from the other end of the Alabama-Washington game is that the Crimsons will have a float in the parade of the Tournament of Roses. Manager Royce, of the Huntington hotel, where the Crimsons will stop, wired for the colors of Alabama and stated in his telegram that he would arrange for a float in honor of Alabama for the big parade. Whether any of the Crimson stars will adorn the float was not stated, but there are a number of Crimsons who could adorn it and add beauty.

They're packing their overcoats, raincoats, those waterproof football trousers and every other thing that is apt to be needed either for pleasure or for the game. Clothing stores have been doing a flourishing business. Three big trunks are ready to hold the football gear of the Tide.

It started raining this past Sunday and kept raining for so long that it finally forced the Tidesmen to subside from practice Wednesday afternoon. At any rate, the practice of this week is apt to prove good for the Tidesmen, although you couldn't get any native son to ever say that it was anything but sunshine and oranges in California.

Hubert Going Great.

"Papa" Hubert is feeling right kittenish these days. The big Crimson back is ploughing through the line in scrimmage in a fashion that is prettier to see than any of his previous work. He is also skirting the ends in a style that reminds you of Mack Brown. It is taking several tacklers to bring him down, and he is charging low with lots of drive. Pooley's triple-threat ability is certainly one of the many bright spots in Alabama's attack, and his defensive tactics should be noticed on the field on New Year's day.

Little Wallace Wade is going out to California. You may not know Wallace, Jr., but he is a coming football star. You ought to see him of afternoons with his team of managerial candidates, scrubs and onlookers—well, he has one, with regular signals, too. Wallace gets a big thrill out of catching passes and blocking out opponents on plays, and don't think he is not a favorite with all the men. It will be a big experience for Wallace, Jr., and one that is certain to be entertaining.

Alabama will not practice en route to Pasadena. The territory between here and there will be seen via the Pullman windows with the exception of the Grand Canyon. There a stop of several hours, long enough to see the sun rise and set, is planned. As a result, the Tidesmen will arrive in Pasadena about next Wednesday and will have more than a week to get into shape. It is not going to be any sight-seeing around Pasadena either, says Coach Wade.

Pasadena, as you might know, is pretty close to Los Angeles and a lot of other rather well known towns. Coach Wade is a firm believer in training and realizes only too well that the 'Bama boys will need every ounce of strength against the Purple Tornado. Coming back, it will be a through train to Tuscaloosa, insofar as the Alabama squad is concerned. All of which must convince the most rabid tourist that this is a football trip and not a sight-seeing one.

No intimation of the opening lineup has been given by Coach Wade. There's lots of time for that. Twenty-two men are making the trip and it is not so hard to see that the probable line-up will come from T. Brown, Hudson and Winslett, ends; Camp, Perry and Pickhard, tackles; Captain Jones and Buckler, guards; Holmes, center; Hubert, Barnes, Mack Brown, Gillis, Caldwell and Johnson, backs.

WASHINGTON TEAM "LIVES" FOOTBALL

Seattle, Wash., December 18.—(AP) Mud, rain, cold and darkness will be disregarded by the University of Washington football squad after the examinations of the school quarter end today, Coach Enoch Bagshaw declares.

Practice sessions for the east-west game in the Pasadena Rose Bowl New Year's day with the University of Alabama's Crimson Tide will be the main occupation of the huskies after this afternoon, Bagshaw promised. A training session starts for the squad this afternoon so the men will be together practically all the time until the game and will "live" football until after the contest is over.

WALTER ECKERSALL WILL REFEREE.

Pasadena, Calif., December 18.—(AP) Pasadena Rose Bowl officials today announced officials for the New Year's day football game between Washington and Alabama universities as follows:

Walter Eckersall, Chicago, referee.
Ralph McCord; Illinois, umpire.
George Varnell, Chicago, head linesman.
Harry Springer, Pennsylvania, field judge.

BATTLING SIKI LAID TO REST

New York, December 18.—(AP)—Chanting Moslem prayers, six pallbearers wearing turbans and fezzes, the garb of Islam, carried to the grave today the silver gray coffin containing the body of Louis Phal, former light-heavyweight pugilist champion of the world, better known as "Battling" Siki.

A brief service had been conducted earlier by the Rev. Clayton Powell, of the Abyssinian Baptist church. Siki's widow, escorted by members of the homicide squad, drove to the Flushing cemetery.

Hundreds of residents of the negro district in Harlem crowded into the funeral parlors where the services were conducted. Detectives mingled with the crowd outside in the hope that Siki's slayer might appear and betray himself.

The pugilist was found murdered early Thursday morning in a street in the west side district known as "Hell's Kitchen."

GAMBLE LEADS TULANE CREW

New Orleans, December 18.—(AP)—Harry Gamble, left end on this season's team, was elected captain of Tulane's 1926 football squad late today. Next season will be his last at the local university. Horace Talbot was elected alternate captain. A previous attempt to elect a captain failed when the team could not agree on a selection.

TEX INVADES FOREIGN RINGS

Paris, December 18.—(AP)—Tex Rickard has entered the European boxing promotion field, it was learned today on good authority. The New York promoter has acquired an important interest in the French firm of "Manitot," which for the last year has controlled the organization of boxing bouts in Paris.

It was announced today that Jefferson Dickson, of Jackson, Miss., has entered the firm as the partner of Antoine Boyer, who has been head of "Manitot" since its organization in 1923.

Miss Louisa Candler Is Hostess At Lovely Dance at 'Callanwolde'

Initiating the elaborate social program which set the seal of a gay Christmas season was the dancing party at which Miss Louisa Candler was hostess Friday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Candler, on Briarcliff road.

The guests assembled in the handsome ballroom on the second floor of the home, which was transformed into a gay Christmas scene with lovely holiday decorations. The ceiling of the ballroom was garlanded with smilax from the central chandelier to the four corners of the room. The lights of the chandelier and the wall lights were covered with bright red tulip shades.

At one end of the ballroom was a large table holding two large silver punch bowls. The central decoration of the table was a miniature Santa Claus figure driving a sleigh filled with small red candles. At the other end of the room were two tall floor lights, hung with red and tinsel decorations to suggest Christmas trees. Myriads of tiny red and white balloons studded the ceiling, forming a floating canopy.

Attractive Favors.

The favors were gaily-colored caps and noise-makers. The Christmas idea was further carried out in the ices, which were molded in the shape of Santa Claus figures.

The young hostess was assisted in entertaining by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Candler, Miss Catherine Candler and Howard Candler, Jr.

Miss Candler received her guests wearing a dainty frock of pink chiffon appliqued in pink velvet roses. She wore a shoulder bouquet of tiny pink rosebuds.

The Howard theater is a splendid place to leave the kiddies Saturday while mother does her necessary shopping, for there is promised the most beautiful program ever given at the popular Saturday matinees, where children are cared for so well by the chaperoning committee and by the boy and girl scouts, that it is not necessary for parents to attend unless they wish.

Santa Claus, a beautiful Christmas tree, Christmas carols and other music, not to forget a picture program especially chosen for this big day, will occupy the children most happily for the hour and a half between its starting time at 9:30 and 11 o'clock when the mothers may call for them. A large crowd of children both from Atlanta and from neighboring towns is expected Saturday to see the Christmas picture, "The Top of New York," and a Baby Peggy two-reel, "Jack and the Beanstalk." The admission is as usual, 10 cents.

Mr. and Mrs. Speer Give Dance to John Silvey Firm

One of the most elaborate of the week-end affairs, and inaugurating the Christmas festivities was the annual dinner-dance at which Mr. and Mrs. William A. Speer were hosts on Friday evening at the Piedmont Driving club to the firm of John Silvey & company. This was a most beautiful affair, and has been an annual custom for about 30 years.

The ballroom of the club was most artistically decorated, Christmas decorations being used in a most effective way. Evergreens entwined the pillows of the ballroom and lovely red wreaths hung in the panels on the walls around the room.

The large table, where covers were placed for 84 guests, was in a hollow square, in the center of which a replica of a formal sunken garden made a beautiful scene. A fountain played in the midst of this lovely setting. Flagstone walks were laid amid green grass, and boxwood plants, cedar and fur trees were planted in attractive arrangement, giving a most beautiful effect.

Insurance executive says Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is "Conqueror of Constipation"

Former addict to pills and drugs says ALL-BRAN restored youthful vim.

Here is a most remarkable tribute to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN:

For more than one-third of a century, I was an addict to all kinds of pills, drugs and nostrums to alleviate the torturss resulting from constipation. They brought only temporary relief. Then I tried Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and as a result I have a new birth of freedom from the terrible foe of the race. I am again in the pink of condition, the personification even of youthful vigor in my advancing years. Truly, Mr. W. K. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the conqueror of constipation.

Gratefully yours,
(Signed) A. M. SWEENEY,
The Federal Reserve Life Insurance Co.

Let Kellogg's ALL-BRAN conquer constipation forever for you. Doctors recommend it. It is what they call a bulk food, that sweeps the intestine clean, stimulating digestion and normal, healthy action. Something habit-forming pills and drugs can never do.

Eat at least two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. If eaten regularly, relief is guaranteed or your grocer returns the purchase price. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is made in Battle Creek, Mich. Served in leading hotels and restaurants. Sold by all grocers.

"OLD HOMESTEAD" TO BE SCENE OF FAMILY GATHERING AT XMAS

Presence of Charming Visitor Will Add Merriment To Popular Household

BY BEVERLY BURGESS.

Wouldn't you love to take a peep into The Old Homestead, the abode of the Connallys and Spaldings, as they gather around the tree, Christmas morning!

Think of the joy and brightness in a home, any morning, where there are, besides the grown-ups, five darling, happy, natural, POPULAR girls! All in their teens with the cup of joy brimming full for every one of them! Think of the innoculation of happiness from them running through, of necessity, the entire family connection. "Joy and happiness are as contagious as disease and sorrow," some one has reminded us, in connection with the Yuletide spirit.

To add to the merriment of the season at The Old Homestead this year, there is to be a Christmas visitor!

Lenora Gordon, of Rome, schoolmate of Constance and Frances Spalding, will be here for the holiday season.

Constance and Frances are home from Randolph-Macon in Lynchburg, all fresh and eager for home lights, home delights, home friends and the Christmas parties!

This bright family circle widens far into the utmost reaches of a city-wide connection of charming kin, who will contribute to the holiday celebration of these young people. Many parties, and much delightful goings-on, will there be for the little Spaldings at The Old Homestead this Christmas!

To Dr. and Mrs. Connally, the devoted grandparents, in whose home this happy family reside, the fruition of a long, useful and Christian life is being reaped and together they are spared to enjoy these lovely grandchildren in their youthful pleasures. Such are some of the kindly compensations of lives well spent.

In this household the atmosphere has always expressed the heartening value of good cheer and consideration of others.

If there is a home in Atlanta that more nearly represents the "hearthside securities" and all they claim for it, it is the Old Homestead, the home of the Connallys and Spaldings.

Ghosts on Whitehall.

Have you heard Laura Candler's moo-coo cow low?

Strange question, is it not?

Why should you ever hear the cow at the Asa Candlers, Jr., low?

You probably feel that you are not friends of sufficient intimacy at Briarcliff Manor to warrant the like of this.

The unusual thing about this is that it is heard more often on Whitehall, at Five Points, or in the fashionable haunts of the different city clubs than at the Briarcliff road estate.

Recently we were passing the Howard theater, which is about the busiest part of uptown Peachtree, when I heard, very unmistakably, the lowing of a cow.

Immediately, I spoke of it as being most strange. Nothing of the bovine variety was in evidence at all.

The old days of the Mt. Perrian ghost story came to mind.

The next day we were passing Keely's corner, when I distinctly heard the same noise. Again the strange significance was spoken of.

A member of the party in my car said: "Oh, haven't you heard Laura Candler's moo-cow horn on her car? It is the sensation of the town! In coming home from the O. B. X. dance the other night, in the wee sma' hours just before the break of day, Laura was really disturbed for fear that some suburbanite might mistake her horn for the lowing of their cattle and a marauder be suspected.

Just at this time the big Candler Cadillac passed, and I saw well the moo-cow that had been the cause of so much disturbance. Evidently the chauffeur knew the excitement he was causing, for he did not fail to give the pedestrians on the sidewalks as much benefit of it as he dared in the presence of the blue-coated citizenry standing around!

An Unusual Predicament.

Clayton Carnes, whom you all know as one of the most popular of the young college set, tells a good joke on himself.

This winter Clayton has been playing around enjoying his friends, his home, but not going to school. Next term he is going back as a full-fledged Tech man.

Recently he was tensing his mother for some new bedroom curtains.

Mrs. Carnes, knowing how heavily time hung on her son's hands, began bargaining with him.

"All right," said she, "I'll give you the curtains for your windows if you will wash the windows, inside and out!"

"Easy," said Clayton, "get the curtains ready!"

And to the windows he turned. The work on the inside went off as smoothly as a mariage bell, but how to do the outside of these high windows was more than he could tell.

He decided the best method of procedure was to sit in the window with his body hanging outside and his feet balancing him. The lower sash was cleaned readily, and to the top one he turned. To steady himself and keep his balance he had pulled the window on his legs as close as he could bear to have it, and now that it was time to shift sashes, he tried to raise it. It would not budge. Over and over he tried, but it availed him nothing. He was caught as in a vice by the snapping of some kind of a patented burglar device. Wiggling, twisting, squirming, nothing lifted the spring which held the window absolutely stationary. He called his mother. There was no response. Louder and louder he called. No luck. Then he began kicking over furniture. The desk, the chair, the table, all went over, and still no one came to his rescue.

At last the maid in the next yard passed around the corner of the house, and to her he turned for help. "Ring my front door bell, and if my mother doesn't come, call the police or the hook and ladder company."

Succor at last was forthcoming, and later the curtains were, too.

"Your article about beauty contests was more than interesting and I have to take a few minutes to give you my ideas," writes "Interested Mother."

"It would be wonderful to have the kind of contest you suggest—one where physical beauty is judged in connection with character, intelligence and personality. Then any mother could enter her daughter and be proud of the fact that she was entered.

"But the other kind of beauty contest! I have three daughters and before I would enter one of them in these contests, dress their precious bodies in a one-piece bathing suit and march them out to run the gauntlet of judges and the mob, I would suffer my live body to be chopped into bits."

Another correspondent whose keenness and originality assisted me once before in presenting an interesting angle on a question, begins her letter with a quotation:

"And let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan, the palace.

"The American people have fallen for the beauty contest as if it were something new, but if they would pause long enough for a glimpse into the history of Media, Persia and Babylon they would discover that the beauty contest is about as ancient as Eve and the apple—in fact, as ancient as the vanity of women. The old kings and their procurers were more frank than the theatrical managers of our Babylon. The maidens, or at least their fathers and owners, knew why their daughters were sought throughout all the provinces. There were no newspapers, no photographers, no movies in those days, but there was the same demand for fair maidens.

"Do not think I take beauty contests too seriously, but it is really amazing, even amusing that the gullible public is so oblivious to ancient history and the tricks of mammon. An ideal of beauty and a commercial scheme are two vastly different things."

Two of a Kind.

Here's a story:

When the circus came to town Pat had no money for a ticket. He offered his services to the circus manager for the price of admission. The manager said: "Pat, the lion died last night, and we saved his pelt. If you'll crawl into that till the show opens, you can see everything."

Pat got into the pelt and was led to the cage. As he was getting in he saw a huge Bengal tiger glowering at him from the farther end of the cage.

"I'll not go into the cage with that terrible baste," he shouted.

Whereupon the "tiger" lifted up its head and said: "Come right in, Pat, I'm Irish, too."

So I'll show my head and say: "Come right in, my two friends, I'm in agreement too."

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

Absorption.

My child is so absorbed in his play that he will not obey me when I call him.—Stirred Up.

Answer.—And yet the very keynote of success is to concentrate and be so absorbed that everything else is shut out of consciousness. If your child did not concentrate you would think there was something wrong with him.

In calling a child to our business, which we have in store for him, let us be careful not to interfere with his own business. A free leaflet entitled "So Absorbed He Will Not Obey" goes into this question more deeply. Others may have it for an S. A. S. E.

What to Give.

What Christmas gifts may a single man send a girl who is not his fiancee?—Doubtful.

Answer.—The man who is not engaged to a girl may send her flowers, candy, fruits, new music, a bit of pottery, glassware, but never anything for her personal use, such as clothing, jewelry or dressing accessories.

Anything to Please.

My child will not stand up for his rights. He used to argue, but all of a sudden he accepts everything that we tell him.—Wondering Dad.

Answer.—Perhaps he has found, as some mothers and fathers do, that an argument is the beginning of quarrel. You know of the story of the teacher who suddenly said to Willie: "What is the shape of the earth, Willie?"

"Round."

"How do you know it is round?"

"All right, it is square then. I don't want to start an argument about it."

Apron Strings.

What do you mean by "psychological weaning?"—Reader.

Answer.—It is the process by which the adolescent gets away from his family. Primitive races celebrated publicly the entrance of the adolescent into adult life. We leave it to the boy and girl to disconnect themselves from emotional and economic dependence upon the home.

ANDREWS PRAISES GEORGIA DIRECTOR OF PROHIBITION

Washington, December 18.—(Special.)—Ben Sharp, regional director of the prohibition enforcement district including Georgia, is praised as a man "of experience, of character and of confidence that he is setting up an organization of his own with which he will be able to handle this problem successfully," by General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement.

Sharp was thus characterized by Andrews when the latter appeared before the house appropriations committee to discuss appropriations for the coming year. Sharp's headquarters are at Charlotte, N. C.

Old "Saint Nick"

Our old friend, Santa Claus, was born 1,600 years ago. He lived in Asia Minor, and legend tells us that he was first a monk, then an abbot, and finally a bishop. In history he is known as St. Nicholas.

We know little about the life of St. Nicholas, but this legend has come down through the ages:

"There lived a poor nobleman who had three daughters. He wanted to find husbands for them, but he had so little money that he could not give dowries for their weddings. So it looked as though the young women would have to go without husbands.

"St. Nicholas learned about the trouble in the nobleman's home. Walking past the house at night, he tossed a purse filled with gold pieces through an open window. The purse fell at the feet of the nobleman, who picked it up and used the money as a dowry for the marriage of his eldest daughter. On later evenings, St. Nicholas tossed in two more bags of gold for the other daughters.

"The nobleman wondered who the kind friend was. The third time a purse came in the window, he ran out of the door—and caught the robe of 'Saint Nick.' The saint did not want to have his kindness known, but he was forced to admit his deeds."

Perhaps that story is true; perhaps it is not. At any rate, it was widely told, and within a few centuries, people took up the custom of making gifts in memory of St. Nicholas.

The Dutch settlers who came to New Amsterdam (New York) brought the St. Nicholas custom to America. Dutch children found gifts in their shoes or stockings upon a December morning each year. They spoke of their jolly friend as "San Nicholaas" (San Nico-laws). In speaking the name quickly, children made it sound like "San NiClaws."

Now we write it "Santa Claus."

In Holland, children are told that horses or donkeys pull "Saint Nick" and his load of toys to the homes of good boys and girls. They often put hay or potato peelings or carrots in their shoes, stockings or baskets. These are for the purpose of giving a bite or two to the fleet steeds. In the morning, these offerings are gone; but presents are found in their stead.

Next week I plan to print a Christmas fairy tale in the corner. Watch for it Monday.

Q.: (1)—Is the Parthenon in ancient Greece? (2)—How was the ancient Olympus buried? Sherril Brook, age 10.

A.: (1)—The remains of the Parthenon still exist in Greece, at the city of Athens. Before 1687, the building was standing in good condition; but in that year, the Turks used it as a powder magazine. A shell was hurled into the Parthenon by enemy forces from Venice, and the bursting shell caused an explosion which wrecked the building. In spite of that unhappy event, the ruins show us much of the noble work which was put into the structure. The cost of building the Parthenon was about $6,000,000 in our money. (2)—You are probably thinking of Mount Olympus. It has not been buried, but stands as one of the lofty risings of northern Greece. The chief peak is 9,750 feet high.

The GILDED ROSE

BY MAY CHRISTIE

Rosilyn and Landis have been loaned a home for their honeymoon. After a long, silent, unhappy ride, they arrived at their destination, and are shown their rooms.

CHAPTER 18.
Love Dies Hard.

The luggage was brought upstairs. Landis' cases were deposited in the dressing room.

Then he himself appeared.

When they were alone, he approached Rosilyn rather awkwardly, and stooped to give her a perfunctory kiss.

She drew back with a little laugh that sounded almost natural. Her swift resolution had consolidated.

"Landis, there isn't any need for that, you know. I think you and I understand each other."

He reddened.

"What d'you mean?"

"That neither of us need play at—at loving—when we both know that the marriage—our marriage—was purely a matter of convenience." She got the words out somehow, though each one was a stab of agony at her loving, sensitive young heart."

Dumbly he stared at her. She continued bravely:

"It's a fair enough bargain on both sides. You've lifted me up from nothing to a—a fine position—as your wife. On my side I can give you something, too. But we needn't keep up the pretense of caring—"she choked back the lump that would rise in her throat—"for each other, any longer, beyond being just—just friends. See?"

"No, I dont see." He bit his lip, disturbed and startled.

"Then you will in time. And be grateful to me. I'm thinking of you as well as of myself." Then she added, as though it were an after-thought: "I've ordered the bed made up for you in the dressing room. You'll be quite comfortable in there—or there are plenty of other larger rooms to choose from."

He looked gravely, intently, at his young wife.

"A marriage—in name only—Rosilyn? Is that what you mean?"

"Yes, Landis, that is what I mean," she answered, very low.

Young Mrs. Landis Ridgeway, slowly descending the staircase of the great, gloomy country house for the first honeymoon breakfast with her husband, looked anything but a radiant and happy bride.

"'The maiden all forlorn' I'd call her! Not much class or style, is she?" whispered one servant to another, on the upper landing.

To which the second one replied:

"When I took in their morning tea, you could have knocked me down with a feather, for the bridegroom wasn't in her room at all, but sleeping soundly in the dressing room, and she broad awake, with her eyes all swelled as though she'd spent the night crying! I'm right sorry for the girl, I am!"

Unconscious of these whispered comments, Rosilyn found her way to the dining room, where the morning meal was laid for two.

There was no sign of Landis.

Rain was pouring down the windows, as though the very heavens had opened. Torrential rain, as heavy as last night! The odd idea came to Rosilyn that the sympathetic skies were weeping for the travesty of this—her honeymoon!

To be married for ones money!

Oh! humiliating thought!

And such irony of fate to learn the truth when it was just too late, and the ceremony was over!

"Good morning, Lady Fair!" Landis strode into the room with a determined air of making the best of things, and deposited a light kiss upon her cheek. To the sensitive, unhappy little bride, the effort of the marital salute—so passionless and so perfunct—made the hurt ache more bitterly.

She replied, mechanically:

"Horrible day, isn't it? Worse than yesterday!"

He flung a keen look at her. Gad! the poor child did look bad this morning. Yesterday's festivities had been too much for her. Not that there had been anything 'festive' in the affair . . . he had loathed the inane formality, the pomp, the crowd of inquisitive spectators—he had loathed his own part in the business, too—if it hadn't been for his mother, and the thought that Rosilyn's affections were involved, darned if he would have had the courage to go through with it!

But what a relief it had been last night to learn that his bride looked on the whole thing merely as a marriage of convenience!

When she had first told him so, he had been utterly astounded, believing, as he did, that she was fond of him.

Yet—once the shock was over—he was thankful that the child had shown such commonsense. He never would have thought it possible.

"A fair enough bargain on both sides," she had informed him, coolly. You've lifted me up from nothing to a fine position as your wife. On my side I can give you something, too. But we needn't keep up the pretense of caring—"

That had definitely "let him out"—the knowledge that her motive in accepting him had not been any foolish love, after all, but an understandable social ambition.

And yet—

From a talk they once had had together—it was on the very night her father died, wasn't it?—she had seemed so simple and unworldly, so capable of genuine emotion. He had kissed her, lightly and unthinkingly, and her reaction to that careless kiss had startled him, proving—as he had thought—that there were hidden and volcanic fires.

Her inheritance had killed all that, it seemed, bringing to the surface of her character all the worldly instincts that, in his cynicism, he now accredited to every woman.

Well, Rosilyn was no worse than himself, was she?

And Lydia was worse than Rosilyn, since Lydia—determined to marry money—still vowed she loved him. She was untrue to love, untrue to womanhood.

His lip gave a little quirk of pain at thought of Lydia. How he had loved her beauty and her gaiety and charm!

He had sworn to kill that love of his—but love dies hard.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.—(adv.)

LOSING WEIGHT.

If you seriously intend to reduce your weight, there is no use picking out one or two fattening foods and deciding that you will stop eating these and grow thin as a consequence. You might, for instance, decide against potatoes and puddings, the two best-known fatteners. For months you will faithfully pass them by.

And then you'll say in great disappointment: "There is nothing in this reduction business; look at me, I weigh as much as ever." And the reason will be that your system craves starch, and while denying it in the form of potatoes and puddings, you have unconsciously been feeding it an equivalent amount in other forms, in beans, perhaps, or bread.

No, that's not the way to reduce. The really fat woman must make a business of reduction, just as she makes a business of her housework, or club work or whatever else she is interested in. Later we can go into methods for her. But most women who ask me about reducing are just on the verge of being too stout, women whose figures are beginning to lose their youthful slim lines, whose movements are growing a little bit heavy.

These women must make a mental list of all common starch and fat rich foods. They needn't avoid them entirely for denying the system the sort of things it is used to isn't very good for it either. These women must watch the amount of the fattenjng foods they usually eat—and then lessen the amount by a third or a half. And make up any hungriness by drinking water or weak ten. Their figures will benefit at once.

Miss Jeneatte G.—A certain number of eyelashes will fall out for the same reason that you must shed some of the hair on your head. You should be replacing the hair all the time so that there is no real loss at all. If you lose your lashes until they become scanty, you will have to give them treatment of some kind, such as a tonic or a massage that will stimulate the circulation in the eyelids.

Seventeen.—Colorless lips usually come from anemia, and should be corrected by building up the health, and not by external applications. A condition such as yours is sometimes overcome by taking cod liver oil.

Charles F. H.—A red nose is often due to digestive disturbances, or it may come from skin troubles, or just from wearing tight clothes that interfere with the circulation.

MONTE CARLO

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Hargrave Wendever, country gentleman and financier, calls on a famous London physician for examination. The doctor's diagnosis shocks the baronet. That night Sir Hargrave dines with friends: Philip Gorse, a clergyman; Lord Edward Pellingham, a politician, and John Marston, a stock broker. Sir Hargrave asks his friends how they would spend the interval if they were suddenly faced with the knowledge that their careers would terminate at the end of six or eight months. Each answers in characteristic fashion.

Gorse stays on after the others leave, and Wendever tells him the doctor has given him his marching orders. He says he intends to go on as if nothing had happened, but would like to give a lift to some poor fellow being. Gorse tells him to keep his eyes open and he will soon find some one in need of help.

The next day Wendever experiments on the people he comes in contact with until he finds one who is in need of a lift. It proves to be a delicate-looking manicure girl, and while she is serving him he asks her if she would like to go to Monte Carlo for two months.

INSTALLMENT VI.

A TANTALIZING VISION.

Miss Martin's fingers trembled as she handed Wendever the slip. The look in her eyes, too, hurt him.

"I'm sorry you asked me that," she said. "I suppose it was my fault, though."

He spoke almost sharply—perhaps the best thing he could have done.

"Don't be ridiculous," he begged. "You haven't even heard my offer, and I can't imagine why you should think I am the sort of man to make an ugly bargain with you for the sake of two or three months' pleasure. Look at me and be honest. Do you think I am?"

"I didn't think so," she admitted. "No."

"Don't be absurd then," he went on. "If I told you how much money I am worth, you would think I was romancing. I told you a falsehood when I said I was writing a book, but all the same I want to make an experiment. I will explain it later on, but all that you need know now is simple enough. I will take you to Monte Carlo, and a sister or a brother—whichever you have who can be spared. I will pay the whole of your expenses and the expenses of your outfit—yours and your companion's, of course. I will arrange for your absence from your occupation. When I have done all this it will cost me as little in proportion to my income as the shilling or eighteen pence you have spent upon your luncheon. Now do you begin to understand?"

"But why should you do this for me?" she asked breathlessly.

"Because," he answered patiently, "you are the first person whom I have come across who exactly fulfills the conditions since I determined to make my experiment. I offer you two months in the sunshine, without a thought or responsibility in the world, if you care for it, and I guarantee that so far as I am concerned it shall not cost you a single shred of your self-respect."

"Of course, I was silly just now," she admitted. "Please forgive me. All the same, it isn't possible. Of course, it isn't possible."

"Think it over," he suggested. "I shall take some one else who wants a change, if not you. You'll be a foolish girl if you don't come."

The vision tantalized her. The light swept across her face. She yielded for a moment to the joy of the idea.

"But—where should I stay?" she asked.

"At my villa, if you are able to bring a brother," he replied. "If not, I should find rooms for you."

She opened her lips. More than once afterward he wondered what it was that she had been about to say. Some thought seemed to flash into her mind. She was a little frightened; she kept silent.

"I am not in a position to offer you a long time to think it over," he continued. "On the other hand, I can't beleive you'll be quite so foolish as to need long to make up your mind. Here is my card," he went on, selecting one and laying it upon the stool, "and I am going to dine at home tonight alone. You will find me in at any time up till midnight. I shall expect you, and bring with you, if you like, your brother or your sister, whichever is available. Remember that it will not cost you a single penny. There will be no trouble about clothes, and I shall arrange for your absence from your work."

She was too bewildered even to thank him for the customary tip which he laid upon her stool. He took the ticket from her unresisting fingers and with a brief "good afternoon" passed out—a tall, distinguished looking figure, with his long, serious face and air of complete detachment. She sat there with the card crushed up in her hand, looking after him.

. . . . . .

Violet, notwithstanding her shabby mackintosh and doubtful hat, excited more than one glance of interest as she passed with flying footsteps up Regent street, across the Circus, and turned into Shaftesbury avenue. For the first time for many weeks there was something outside the dreary day by day routine to think about; a dream, perhaps utterly impossible, but something the mere thought of which had reacted upon her warm, fresh youth and brought the color into her cheeks and the light back into her tired eyes. The young man whom she met at the corner of one of the streets near the Palace stared at her.

"Why, what's the matter, Violet?" he demanded. "Any one left you a fortune?"

She thrust her arm through his. He was wearing a threadbare overcoat which bore the hallmark of the ready made tailor's appeal to the would-be smart youth of a few seasons ago. His turned up trousers displayed exceedingly muddy boots, and he carried neither stick nor umbrella. His features were without distinction, but fairly good of their sort, although his mouth was querulous. His tone indicated ill temper.

"No one has left me anything," she declared, "but I have had a good tip and I have five and seven pence halfpenny left of my week's money. No tea and toast tonight, Robert. We are going to the Cafe Rose."

"Can't be done," he replied gloomily. "You know jolly well it's a two-shilling dinner and I can't afford it. I'll go on to my rooms and get Mrs. Smith."

"Don't be an idiot!" Violet interrupted. "As though I should leave you alone! Didn't I tell you I'd had a good tip? It's my treat. It's a filthy day, and a filthy climate, and a filthy life, but we're going to forget it for half an hour."

"Whom did you get a good tip from?" he demanded suspiciously.

"A regular customer," she assured him. "Only he happened to come in twice today. Don't be absurd, please, Robert. I'm so hungry."

He was easily persuaded. He generally was when it was a matter which ministered to his physical comfort. He even breathed a sigh of relief as they sat down in the stuffy little restaurant and studied the menu.

"Hot soup!" he exclaimed. "That's good, Violet. I wonder——"

He felt in his pockets. Violet held out her hand.

"I told you it was my treat," she insisted.

"That's all right," he repeated. "As a matter of fact, it would have to be. I was just wondering whether I could raise the price of two gins and bitters."

You don't need to," she replied, promptly ordering them. "I'm rolling in money. Didn't I tell you I actually got a tip today like the other girls get sometimes?"

"Not for the same reason, I hope," he grumbled.

"As you very well know, so shut up," she retorted calmly.

The gin and bitters came. He began to crumble his bread.

"Will you hear my news first?" he asked.

"All right," she agreed. "Mine wants a lot of talking about."

"Mine doesn't," he rejoined. "I've got the sack."

"Robert!" she exclaimed.

"No fault of mine," he assured her. "I've got a good recommendation, if that's anything. It's the firm that's doing no good. I've been expecting it for a long time. I knew some of us would have to go, and the others had all been there longer than I had. The manager of our department came and told me himself that he was sorry."

She was thoughtful. It was rather a shock, but in one respect it simplified matters. She glanced at the menu.

"After the soup," she said, "there's fish, and some beef. When we've had the soup and the fish, and when we begin the beef and when you've finished your gin and bitters and drank your first glass of claret, I'll tell you my news."

Total bond sales, 11,551,000.

New York, December 18.—(AP)—Conflicting price movements developed in today's bond market which was featured by the strength of Mexican obligations and renewed bidding for a number of industrial liens. Profit taking reduced some of the recent gains of the railroad issues without seriously impairing the firm undertone of this group.

The favorable reception accorded the modified Mexican debt agreement in Mexico City stimulated a fresh demand for the government and railway bonds on which interest payments will be resumed next year. Several new high records were established on gains running from one to more than 2 points. The rally in French francs, which followed reports that an industrial loan of 10,000,000,000 francs would be floated to strengthen the government's financial position, brought about a sympathetic upward movement in this nation's bonds.

Buyers acted with discrimination in picking out domestic bonds. A few of the less active rail issues, such as Chicago and Northwestern 6s, Green Bay and Western debentures and Cleveland Shore Line 4 1-2s were in demand, contrasting with the selling of Norfolk and Western convertible 6s, Illinois Central 3 1-2s and New Haven 4s.

Most of the trading activity centered in the industrial divisions. Warner Sugar 7s jumped almost 3 points and Skelly 6 1-2s reassumed their leadership of the advance in the oil bonds, in which Pan-American and Sinclair issues participated. Buying was promoted by reports of prospective mergers and new sources of production for individual companies.

Stockholders of the Chrysler corporation authorized today the splitting of common shares on a 2-for-1 basis, under which plan it is proposed to issue 2,720,0000 new common shares for 680,000 shares now outstanding. Application to list the new shares has been made to the New York stock exchange and it is hoped that permanent certificates representing the new shares will be deliverable before the end of the year on the surrender of certificates for the old shares.

Because of the rapid industrial expansion of the south the Tennessee Copper and Chemical corporation is making the largest sales of sulphuric acid in its history to others than fertilizer makers. Acid sales to the fertilizer trade and the fall sales of fertilizer from the company's own plants are both reported to have been good. An active fertilizer demand next spring is anticipated by the company, which, with the increase in the non-fertilizer demand for sulphuric acid, make the earnings outlook for 1926 most encouraging.

The Foundation company director, at a meeting Monday, are expected to authorize a stock disbursement of 40 per cent on class "A" common shares of Foundation Company, foreign. This distribution will amount to 40,000 shares, as the parent company now has outstanding 100,000 shares of capital stock as the result of Although negotiations and discussions for over three years, looking to investment of American capital in the foreign tobacco monopolies, have been fruitless, recent financial developments abroad have made European ngoverenments more receptive and there is now greater promise than ever that these discussions will have results. Recently representatives of the American Tobacco company went to France to survey the situation. The United Cigar Stores Company of America was reprerented in a group that above five years ago made an offer for the French monopoly. The Italian and other foreign monopolies are understood to be involved in the present discussions.

New York, December 18.—(AP)—The cotton market was quiet again today and prices fluctuated within a range of 10 or 15 points. After selling up to 18.98 March broke to 18.77 during the middle of the afternoon but rallied and closed at 18.84 or 7 points net higher. The general market closed very steady, net 7 points higher to 3 points lower.

The market opened firm at an advance of 3 to 11 points in response to the relatively steady showing of the early cables from Liverpool and talk of a firm technical position, which led to expectation of covering before the end of the week. There was some selling at the advance on the unfavorable character of the news from the cotton goods market in Lancashire and reports that one of the private authorities estimated ginnings prior to December 13 at 14,760,000 bales, which would be considered very full figures for the period.

The offerings were absorbed by trade pricing, or further covering, and prices worked up gradually to 18.64 for January and 18.64 for May or 6 to 11 points net higher on the general list. This made a recovery of about 20 to 25 points from the low level of yesterday, but there was no broadening of demand on the advance and prices slipped off again during the afternoon under comparatively small offerings.

January broke to 18.54 and May to 18.56 in the late trading, or back to about yesterday's closing quotations, while the decline was checked by renewed covering with the close 4 or 5 points up from the lowest. General business was quiet during the entire day with a good proportion of the trading attributed to evening-up of accounts in preparation for next Monday's official ginning reports and the approaching holidays.

The week-end figures pointed to an increase of 120,746 bales in the world's visible supply of American cotton for the week compared with 136,212 last year but were considered about a stand-off as a whole. Exports today 7,072, making 4,335,879 so far this season. Port receipts 32,633. U. S. port stocks, 1,558,952.

MARKET AGAIN QUIET AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, December 18.—(AP)—The cotton market was comparatively quiet today and price fluctuations were decidedly narrow. After opening slightly up on good cables and advancing 8 to 9 points during the morning in anticipation of bullish weekly statistics the market declined 8 to 10 points or 1 to 2 points under yesterday's close when it was seen that weekly mill takings as announced by Secretary Hester were 480,000 against 458,000 last year.

The market rallied some on the comparatively light movement into sight but eased off again on fear of large ginnings to be shown by the census bureau on Monday. The close was steady and one point net higher for the day to 3 points net lower.

At the start the market was a shade better on good Liverpool cables and first trades showed gains of 3 to 6 points. After gaining a few points additional and then losing part of the gain prices rallied in anticipation of large mill takings for the week, January trading up to 18.60, March to 18.34, and May to 18.08, or 6 to 9 points above the previous close. After the weekly mill takings were announced they were considered to be disappointing and prices eased off 8 to 10 points to 18.50 for January, 18.24 for March and 18.00 for May. The market soon recovered most of the loss but eased off again in the afternoon on the report of a railroad embargo on cotton into Memphis but recovered slightly right at the close.

A private bureau made the ginnings to December 13, 14,760,000 bales or 902,000 for the last period. Exports for the day totaled only 2,322 bales and for the week they aggregated 292,957 bales.

New York, December 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—Revival of activity and strength in the oil shares was the outstanding development in today's irregular stock market, an early advance in other industrials was checked by a stiffening of call money rates due to heavy withdrawals of gold and other currency in anticipation of the holiday demand.

Trading showed a marked reduction in volume, total sales running just above one and one-half million shares.

French francs made spirited recovery from recent weakness on reports of negotiations for a huge loan to French industry. Commodity markets were irregular. Cotton and coffee futures showed moderate advances but wheat prices lost ground in reflection of the uncertainty over the Argentine crop situation.

The sudden outburst of buying in the oil shares was based on rumors of a merger of some of the California companies, and expectations of an early increase in mid-continent crude prices. Pacific Oil was the leader in that group, closing 2 points higher at 74½, while Sinclair and Standard Oil of California, California Petroleum, and Houston closed about 1 to 2 points higher.

The Pan-American issues were heavily bought on prospects of huge Mexican output next year.

Some new leaders were brought forward in the rail group but the general rail list showed the effects of heavy profit taking. Chicago and Eastern Illinois common and preferred advanced 3½ and 3 points, respectively, and Northern Pacific established a new 1925 peak price at 77¼. Net declines of a point or more were recorded, however, by Louisville and Nashville and a few others.

Standard industrials showed only fractional net changes. U. S. Steel common fluctuated within a range of 1 point, closing one-quarter higher at 133¼. American Can closed three-eighths higher at 253½ and Baldwin showed a net loss of one-eighth at 130½, after having sold 2 points above that figure.

Buoyancy again developed in a number of high-priced industrials. General Electric scored an extreme advance of nearly 10 points at 324½ and then eased to 321 and California Packing, Continental Insurance, Fidelity-Phoenix Insurance, Fleischmann, General Cigar, Kelsey Wheel, National Lead, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and United Fruit closed 2 to nearly 4 points higher. S. S. Kresge jumped 15 points to 725 on a few sales.

Bullish operations also were successfully conducted in some of the low and medium-priced issues. Postum Cereal soared 10 points to a new high record at 101½, Rossia Insurance jumped nearly 9 points to 67½, and A. M. Byers, General Outdoor Advertising, National Enameling, Pressed Steel Car common and preferred and Standard Milling advanced 2 to 5 points.

Weakness again developed in the motors and rubbers. Chrysler fell back 3½ to 104½ and General Motors, Mack Truck, U. S. Rubber, Dupont, Fisher Body, Goodrich Rubber and Timkep Roller Bearings eased 1 to 2½ points. Stewart Warner showed independent strength by advancing over 2 points to a new high record of the year at 96¾.

Call money renewed at 4½ per cent and then advanced to 5½, closing at the top. Time money was in moderate supply with 5 per cent the ruling rate. Commercial paper was unchanged.

French francs rallied over 20 points to 3.85 cents, and then eased about 5 points from the top in the later trading. Demand sterling held firm at $4.84½. Polish zloty rallied 100 points to 11.00 cents and other European exchanges moved within narrow and irregular limits.

The Day in Finance

BY R. L. BARNUM.

Stock Market Today Was Typical Pre-Holiday Traders' Affair—Keen Competition in Automobile Business in 1926 is Seen.

New York, December 18.—Venturesome professional traders, who sold stocks short yesterday on the chance that the federal reserve bank here would raise its rediscount rate after the close of the market, covered this morning on the announcement that there would be no change in the rate. The advances thus scored in the stock market, however, did not hold. After a recovery in prices, the market became a typical pre-holiday traders' affair.

Christmas has been spoiled for many people for many years by the stock market, that is, for the people who watch others make money during the year in the stock market and come in late in December on the long side with expectations of making their Christmas money. Money is made easily in the stock market at times. But usually December is not one of the times. In years of advancing stock market prices, usually the advance is over by November, and December is a month of stock market adjustments, including the closing out of pools previously formed. People who attempt to get their Christmas money out of the stock market, even in a bull year, by waiting until December to come in on the long side, usually experience a blue and expensive Christmas.

$1,000,000 Made on Rails.

One trader in the stock market, who has this year been on the long side of Southern, Seaboard, Rock Island, Northwestern and B. & O., has just sold the last of his long stocks, cleaning up actual profits of over $1,000,000. This trader thinks the chances favor higher prices for rails in 1926. But he prefers to turn 1925 paper profits into real money and start 1926 stock marketwise with a clean slate and an open mind.

Application for a receivership for Apperson, together with the announcement made a few days ago of a substantial price cut coming in Dodge, leads well-informed Wall street people to believe that 1926 is going to see very keen competition among automobile manufacturers.

It is understood here that in placing the two Grahams in charge of Dodge, one as president, the other as sales manager, the Dillon-Read banking interests, now in control of Dodge, are going out after business, and will give some other companies, including General Motors, the biggest run for their money in 1926 that these companies have had since the war ended. The Grahams made a success of manufacturing light, low-priced trucks, without scratching the surface of the market for that particular sort of automobile.

Bullish on 1926 Outlook.

A great majority of people are extremely bullish on the general outlook for 1926. But it is also true that a great majority of traders in the stock market are also long of stocks to the point where brokers are worried over their loans. Some farsighted Wall street people are wondering, with loans at the existing high level, where the buying power is coming from that will bring about a real resumption in 1926 of the bull market of October and November of 1925.

Call money renewed today at 4½. However, early in the day, it became apparent that heavy January 1 requirements were being arranged. By noon the rate was 5 per cent and shortly thereafter there was an advance to 5½.

In its January 1 discussion of the general financial and industrial situation and outlook, the National Bank of Commerce, one of the largest of the commercial banks here in New York, will say:

"Good business continues to be the outlook for late winter and early spring. Forward policies must be made months in advance, however, for many enterprises and it therefore becomes necessary to weigh the influences which will determine the course of events beyond spring."

It is added that cheap money alone does not revive business and high rates do not check it, unless contributory influences are operative, and that more frequently than otherwise rates are quite as much a consequence as they are a cause of prevailing business conditions. The belief is then expressed that the existing intimate relations between the money market, the future stock market, building and construction, real estate speculation and installment buying, combine to give the question of money rates a place of great importance in connection with business probabilities for 1926.

Medium Rates on Money Seen.

After full discussion, the conclusion is reached that the outlook is for neither high or low money rates for 1926, with general trade promising no boom, but satisfactory profits "for those who can win them by means of enterprise and economy."

President Byram, of the St. Paul, testifying in the investigation by the interstate commerce commission of why the road was thrown into the hands of receivers early last year, admits that many plans were considered by the management for meeting the $48,000,000 maturing bonds, but that each plan was frowned upon by the New York bankers, who stood out for a receivership. This fits in exactly with well informed Wall street's viewpoint. The obvious thing for the St. Paul management to have done was to have asked the holders of the $48,000,000 maturing bonds to extend payment by taking a new bond, which would have given the road an opportunity to work out of its difficulties, just as Northern Pacific and other northwestern railroads are now doing without any increase in freight rates. That plan, however, was turned down by the New York bankers, who insisted upon a receivership with heavy assessment of stocks and bonds.

MIXED MOVEMENT INFLUENCES CURB

New York, December 18.—(AP)—Mixed price movements continued in today's curb market with principal bullish activity centering in the oil shares. Gulf, Prairie Oil and Gas, Vacuum and Humble advanced a point or so in apparent anticipation of an early increase in crude prices. Both Lago issues attained new record high prices and then reacted sharply on selling of professional traders called upon to make payment for the stock which had been traded in on a "when issued" basis.

Electrical Refrigeration issues displayed a better tone, Nizer B advancing over a point. Radio shares were weak, DeForest, Rova, Liberty and Jones selling at new low records for the year. Motors held relatively steady. National Tea fluctuated erratically on odd lot sales, opening 4 points higher at 599, jumping to a new record high at 649 and then dropping back to 605.

Reactionary tendencies continued to predominate in the public utility group, Lehigh Power securities dropping 3 points and American Power and Light, American Super Power B and Northern States Power A about a point each.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW

New York, December 18.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

Holiday influences are more perceptible in trade and industry as the month advances. Retail trade of all kinds, especially of goods adapted to the season, has quickened, while wholesale trade in staples has slowed down quite swiftly. In jobbing trade, quick reorder business has been especially prominent. There is no question that holiday buying at retail is active, more so than for some years past, but there are signs that the lower price of cotton and unsatisfactory conditions in parts of the corn belt have tended to render this buying of smaller volume than earlier expected. A rather striking exception is cited in parts of Montana, where payments by some banks suspending some time ago have increased the volume of money in circulation. The least buoyant reports as to retail trade seem to come from parts of the southwest.

Weekly bank clearings, $11,037,316,000.

Sugar.

New York, December 18.—A decline of 1-32 cents occurred in raw sugar today with sales of 20,000 bags Cuban for late December shipments at 4.08 duty paid. More reassuring labor news from Cuba, and the decline in spots caused heavy European and commission house selling during the early trading in raw futures, under which prices declined 4 to 7 points.

December showed the maximum loss under liquidation induced by the issuance of 28 notices and closed at the lowest, but later deliveries rallied on covering. Final prices were 7 points lower on December and 2 higher to 1 lower on other positions. December, 2.23; January 2.31; March, 2.37; May, 2.49; July, 2.59.

Refined was unchanged at 5.00 to 5.50 for fine granulated. There were good withdrawals against old contracts but new business was light.

Dry Goods.

New York, December 18.—Present prices are to be continued on prints and percales for deliveries made in January, February and March by the large corporation printers. Grey cloths ruled quiet today, most of the business being in small lots for prompt shipment. Fall flannels were ordered for deliveries continuing into April. Silk was bought in small filling-in quantities. Silk goods and silk hosiery have been in improved demand. Dress goods for spring were ordered in moderate quantities, demand centering in the sport and sheer lines. Burlaps continued quiet. An improved business was reported in household linens, fancies and some of the sheer fabrics.

Coffee.

New York, December 18.—Coffee futures opened at a decline of 4 points to an advance of 5 points but small offerings were soon absorbed an dprices later advanced on reports of a firmer Rio market.

March sold up from 16.35 to 16.50, and the general list closed firm at net advances of 15 to 30 points. December, 16.75; January, 16.65; March, 16.55; May, 16.40; July, 16.10; September, 15.70. Estimated sales, 20,000.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

PYNCHON & CO.

New York, December 18.—With the exception of the oils, the general list was reactionary. The long expected oil move appears to be on.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, December 18.—There was a strong upward swing in the oils and considerable profit-taking in other issues with most stocks being well taken on slight dips. Perhaps the advice issued by one well-known advisory source to take profits at this time accounts for some of this selling. The market as a whole is a very conflicting affair with considerable profit-taking matched against some covering and fresh buying. It is very difficult to judge, but the trend seems still upward.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, December 18.—The stock market in general moved upward during the early trading in response to the fact that the Federal Reserve bank had retained its discount rate at 3½ per cent.

There was a good deal of short covering instrumental in the betterment of prices. After the early advances, however, the market turned reactionary and before noon many gains were turned into losses. The advance in call money from 4½ to 5½ in the afternoon which followed calling of loans on quite a large scale, caused quite some determined selling by the professional element.

Late in the afternoon there was a sudden spurt upward in oils, and there was a general strong demand.

Cotton Letters.

PYNCHON & CO.

New York, December 18.—Most cotton houses, both north and south, have advised us of a lessened demand from mills. Meanwhile, retail distribution of goods continues in heavy volume. The price strength in primary raw cotton markets indicates holders have confidence in their position. We are advised many shippers have booked orders calling for deliveries of cotton well into the spring, which confirms reports from spinning centers that manufacturers have contracted heavily.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, December 18.—Liverpool was slightly better than due this morning but there was so little business in the market on the opening that the market did not fully respond to the advance abroad. However, the opening was quite steady with moderate buying from commission houses. There was absolutely no outside in the market today and transactions were confined to switching between the various months. The fact that the market withstood considerable liquidation yesterday has caused some hesitancy on the part of those who are inclined to sell the market and we have very little cotton offered at the market. The south has not been a free seller, whereas the trade continues to show a tendency to buy cotton every time the market declines. With October around 18 cents, the low price of this month is acting to stabilize the market. We do not look for any great change in the market before the week-end. Liverpool futures are due tomorrow: January 9.57, March 9.60.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO.

New York, December 18.—Today's market presented a two-sided appearance. Shorts who sold yesterday on the chance that the federal reserve rate would be advanced covered this morning. Little change in the character of the news was discernible. Certain stops were wanted sufficiently to cause an up-bidding of prices. Those in demand included a few of the oils, some of the rails, the equipment stocks and a group of specialties. A rumor was in circulation that negotiations were under way looking to the consolidation of some of the producing companies of the Pacific coast section. The fact that production has been declining and prices advancing and that the mid-continent gasoline price war was ended, were influences in favor of the oils. Buying of equipment shares was on reports of increasing business.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, December 18.—We see little change for any important improvement until a larger proportion of the crop has been distributed. At the same time, we do not at these prices expect the balance of the crop to exert any particular pressure, and after more of it is marketed we look for better markets, and distinctly better markets in the event that any apprehension develops as to the outlook for another crop.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, December 18.—Trading was evenly divided today and prices moved but little. Spinners' takings were considerably less than last week but were also larger than last year. Spot and drygoods markets are quiet and mills show no disposition to make further contracts for the actual.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, December 18.—The undertone of the market was steadier today, the declining tendency of Liverpool having been arrested for the present, probably owing to a sharp recovery in Egyptian cotton. Spinners' takings for the week were somewhat smaller than generally expected, yet they continued in excess of last year, and the week's in sight was smaller than generally looked for, which served as a sustaining influence in the face of good weather inland, and the anticipation of heavy ginnings to December 13, report on which will likely be released at 9 a. m., New Orleans time, Monday, December 21.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, December 18.—There was a feeling at the opening today that there was a scattering short interest which would probably try to cover before the end of the week. This was reflected by moderate advances, but no demand of consequence developed and after selling up to 18.88 for March or about 25 points above yesterday's low level, the market reacted under realizing of southern hedging. Possibly the early advance would have gone further if it had not been for unfavorable Manchester trade advices and another private report pointing to heavy ginnings for the period to December 13. According to private reports, yarns have been accumulating and buyers of cloths are holding off. A Memphis authority was credited with estimating the ginnings at 14,760,000 bales, a figure which, if confirmed by the census report at 11 a. m. on Monday morning, would probably be regarded as pointing to a total for the season slightly in excess of the last government crop estimate.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, December 18.—The cotton trade feels the effect of the the forthcoming ginning report which is expected to show figures between 14,700,000 and 14,800,000 bales. This and the approaching holidays have slowed down the trade to a point where fluctuations are running within a narrow range and it is improbable that there will be any decided variation until after Monday's ginning report.

New York, December 18.—Census report figures, indicating that November consumption had been 375,000 barrels, had a stimulating effect upon cottonseed oil prices, but outside buying was disappointingly light. Closing prices were generally 10 to 16 points net higher. Sales, 10,800 barrels prime crude; 8,624 prime summer, yellow spot 10.13; December closed 10.20; January 10.26; March 10.22; May 10.35.

New Orleans, December 18.—The cottonseed oil future market was firmer today and advanced moderately mainly at large consumption shown for November and for the season to date. The November consumption was put at 375,000 barrels and the total to date 1,845,000. Lard and hogs were a shade higher. Prime summer yellow oil closed at 9.75 or five points up. Prime crude closed unchanged at 8½ cents. Futures closed firm: January 9.58; March 9.63; May 9.63, and July 9.69.

Grain Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, December 18.—Wheat: The market developed heaviness as the session progressed and closed lower in the face of reported sharp recoveries abroad. Trade was lighter and upturns ran into liquidation by tired holders. The export news was rather discouraging, primary receipts were greatly in excess of shipments and market seems to lack fresh buying on the upturns, which caused some of the locals to liquidate. The action of the market would suggest the possibility of being enabled to make purchases on a further setback.

Coarse Grains: Corn followed wheat, the heaviness in wheat leading to unloading by longs and some pressure from locals. Country offerings only moderate, sentiment is inclined to the bear side. Oats trade was much lighter with weakness in December the feature.

Provisions: Moderate trade but firm market with selling scattered while brokers acting for packers were buyers.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO.

Chicago, December 18.—WHEAT: Progress of the Argentine wheat crop is still a factor in the market, as witness the persistent strength early today on reports of rains in southern Argentine, where harvest is under way. Beyond this sentimental factor, the market does not possess immediate reasons for higher prices, notably because of the very indifferent export trade estimates and slowly increasing supplies in the United States. Duluth and Minneapolis stocks have increased 700,000 so far this week and primary receipts continue larger than a year ago as well as considerably in excess of primary shipments. Today's export business was evidently confined to a few loads to the continent. Our own department of commerce expects an Argentine production of 200,000,000 bushels, but this statement was ignored, inasmuch as it was gathered from Argentine trade sources.

Amount of Low Grade Cotton Is Larger Than Since 1920, Secretary Jardine Declares

Cotton Committee of Southern Solons Adjourns After Naming Subcommittee.

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—This year's crop contains more low-grade cotton than any year since 1920, Secretary Jardine declared today in a letter to a special congressional subcommittee.

The letter was addressed to Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, chairman of the special cotton committee, consisting of a senator and representative of each cotton growing state, selected to recommend cotton legislation at this session of congress.

The committee held its first conference here today, but adjourned for the holidays without action beyond appointing a subcommittee to ascertain the amount of this year's cotton crop that is untenderable under futures contracts and is unspinnable.

Letter By Jardine.

The secretary's letter, replying to the subcommittee's request for the information, said:

"I regret that the department of agriculture is without definite information on these subjects. A private statement that has come to us recently shows estimates of the untenderable cotton of this season's crop to range from 2,500,000 bales to 4,500,000 bales, with the average of several estimates about 3,500,000 bales. This includes cotton that is below the lowest tenderable grades and cotton that is less than 7-8 of an inch in length of staple.

"The department has estimated the 1925 cotton crop at 15,008,000 bales of 500 pounds, of which the bureau of the census reported that there were ginned to December 1, 1925, 13,857,686 running bales. This leaves about one and three-fourth million bales of cotton to be ginned before the final ginning report, on March, 20, 1926. Presumably, the cotton remaining yet to be ginned will be of the lower grades, and much of it untenderable It is a safe assumption that no crop in recent years, saving possibly that of 1920, has contained so large a perparation of low-grade cotton of all descriptions or such a preparation of the excessively low grades in particular.

Amount of Unspinnable Cotton.

"With reference to the preparation of the crop, which is 'unspinnable' cotton, it might be said that this term is often used inappropriately to mean cotton of very low grade. Practically all cotton, even the lowest grades, is spinnable and is eventually used in the manufacture of coarse yarns and goods. The objections to the use of extremely low grade cotton are its comparatively large waste content, its inferior finishing properties, reduced mill production and dissatisfaction created among mill operatives, due to the greater amount of dust and fly and the lower earnings of those employed on a piece-work basis.

"Surveys of the kind your inquiry suggests have been undertaken from time to time in the past, when specifically requested by congress. A good deal of difficulty has been experienced in securing dependable data due to lack of uniform classification and the consequent uncertainty as to the comparability of reports. This obstacle has been largely removed by the cotton futures act and the cotton standards act, under which the official standards have within the past two years become thoroughly established. The department regards the regular compilation and publication of data of this kind as highly desirable."

Echols Declared Best Declaimer At High School

John Randolph Echols, a sophomore, was awarded the medal for the best declaimer and William Howell, a senior, for the best debater at the 54th annual Christmas exercises of the Alciphronian Literary and Debating society of Boys' High school Friday morning at the Auditorium.

The negative side won in the debate on the question: "Resolved, that the power of pardon and of commutation of sentence be taken from the president of the United States and the governors of the several states." Joel Hunter, Asa Warren Candler and J. M. Lord were the judges.

On the affirmative side the debaters were William Howell, '26, and Jack Weems, '28 and on the negative, William Thurman, '26, and Richard Clarke, '28.

Opposing Echols in the declamation contest was David Benton, Fitzgerald, '26.

OFFICERS SEEKING MAN WHO ESCAPED IN LIQUOR RAID

Detectives G. M. Gorman and R. D. Dupree Friday were searching the city for the companion of Forrest L. Bedford, of 938 Spring street, who, it is said, escaped from the latter's car Thursday night with a gallon can of whisky. Bedford was placed under arrest by the two officers after his machine had been disabled by pistol shots. The arrest occurred at Spring and Fifteenth streets, almost in front of his home.

Bedford is charged with reckless driving but officers said Friday that an indictment may be asked for assault with intent to murder. According to Detectives Dupree and Gorman, he attempted to drive his high-powered machine into the city car and later attempted to run down Detective Gorman, who was standing in the street.

Gorman drew his pistol and fired three shots. One of the bullets struck the gasoline tank and the other two hit the fenders. When Bedford stopped his machine his companion fled with a gallon can of whisky, officers reported. Bedford said his friend was a negro, but officers stated they obtained a full view of him in the light and declared he was a white man. Bedford is being held under $500 bond.

Amusements

At Atlanta Theater.

Dante, the performer of wonders, will end his engagement at the Atlanta theater today with matinee and night performances at 2:30 and 8:30 o'clock respectively. Dante's show is without question the best of its kind Atlanta has seen in many a day. Greater skill in magic has never been shown. The entire performance moves with precision, which holds the audience in a maze of wonderment. Anyone who wants to spend two hours at a show that provides good, clean, wholesome amusement should not fail to attend one of the remaining performances today.

Coming to Atlanta.

It is a rather difficult matter to coin a word of recommendation to emphasize the eulogistic ecomiums that have been bestowed upon George White's Scandals of 1924 by the dramatic reviewers of New York, Chicago, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit and the other large cities in which it has been seen. Every synonym of praise has been utilized by the various critics to express their approbation of this gorgeous revue, which opens a three-day engagement at the Atlanta theater starting on Thursday night, December 24. Mail orders are now being received. The box office sale starts Monday.

Loew's Grand.

Four performances of the excellent vaudeville bill headed by Francis Renault, world famous impersonator, will be presented Saturday at Lowe's Grand theater. Another popular act on the bill is "The Italian Count" presented by Rogers and Donnelly. Bud and Eleanor Coll appear in a dancing and musical skit; the Lime Trio present a novelty act, while Charlotte and her gang complete the bill in a musical comedy revue. The Loew picture is "Oh You Tony" with Tom Mix.

Keith's Forsyth.

Patrons of Keith's Forsyth theater are enjoying a most unusual and highly extravagant act of melody, terpsichore and mysteries the last of this week in the number of Charles Prevette and his company.

The bill also includes Joe Sully and J. Donovan Mack in entertaining nonsensical chatter. Rose, Ellis and Rose have an unusual skit entitled "The Jumping Jack," and Mazie Wallace and Marty May have a bright and effective fantasy called "Just Suppose." Art Stanley's "Surprise Party" concludes the bill.

The Rialto.

An unusually good and extensive program ends the week's run at the Rialto with final showings this afternoon and evening.

There is "Lord Jim" the feature. There is the first of a new Alberta Vaughan series, called "Amazing Mazie." Then there is the last of the famous series, "The Pacemakers," entitled "Miss Me Again." Of course Pathe News is shown, and Whitney Hubner and his Rialto orchestra put in many extra licks with a special musical program.

At the Howard.

Today marks the final showing of D. W. Griffith's sensational romantic drama of the Chicago jazz belt, "That Royle Girl" at the Howard and also marks the last appearances of Ralph Pollock and his popular orchestra.

Next week the feature picture will be Rudolph Valentino in "Cobra," a fascinating love story that contains all the elements of greatness—romance, drama and sacrifice. Three of the most beautiful women of the screen, as picked by Ernst Linnenkamp, the famous Viennese artist, appear in support of the star. They are Nita Naldi, Gertrude Olmstead and Calire de Lorez.

In connection with the showing of this picture, the Howard also will offer one of the season's biggest musical treats—the Russian Cossack chorus, which is under the personal direction of Serge Socoloff, a musician of great talent. These singers, most of whom are veterans of the world war, are now on a tour of the world, having appeared in the principal cities of Europe, South and Central America and Mexico.

This will be the first time that they have sung in any motion picture theater or at popular prices.

Famous Negro Tenor Given Ovation by Big Audience

Roland Hayes, formerly of Rome, Ga., the son of an ex-slave, who has risen to fame in the musical world by reason of a superb tenor voice and his mastery of technique enthralled a large and attentive audience at the auditorium Friday night with a variety of selections ranging from eighteenth century songs from Mozart to negro spirituals. It was his first appearance in public in his native state and the recognition accorded him was largely in the nature of an ovation.

The auditorium had been divided into sections, one for whites and the other for negroes. Some of Atlanta's most representative citizens, numbering the leaders among lovers of grand opera were in attendance.

The very walls of the auditorium reverberated from the applause accorded the tenor following his rendition of "Le Reve" (from Manon") by Massenet, and after responding to three calls, the singer rendered an encore.

The first of his selections was an aria by Mozart, "Talia e contani sone," and "When I am Laid to Rest" (Dido and Aeneas), by Purcell. With each succeeding selection it seemed that the applause, following each number increased.

He next scored in a number of German "lieder" songs by Schubert and Wolf, and a group of English and French songs. "The Dreamy Lake," by Griffith, which was rendered just prior to the concluding negro spiritual numbers, brought hearty applause, and the singer, forced to an encore, sang two negro spiritual songs, "Didn't It Rain?" and "The Water Boy."

Among the negro spirituals, each of which held the audience's rapt attention, were "Wade in de Water," "Every Time I Feel de Spirit," "Deep River" and "Lit'l David, Play on Yo' Harp."

The piano accompaniments by William Lawrence were ideal.

TILSON INTRODUCES BILL FOR PROBING RUBBER MONOPOLY

Washington, December 18.—(AP)—Another blow was aimed at the British monopoly, controlling crude rubber prices, today when Representative Tilson, Connecticut, republican floor leader, after an investigation with Secretary Hoover, introduced a resolution calling an investigation into the situation by the house commerce committee.

The resolution charged that extortionate profits were being taken in the rubber supply to American consumers through the workings of a British colonial monopoly, and asked the committee to recommend a course of action for the government to protect the public.

Mr. Tilson repeated figures first made current by Mr. Hoover, who has charged that for this year alone $666,000,000 will be unfairly extorted from American rubber users through the workings of the monopoly, which, he said, was only one of several operating in the supply of essential raw materials to industry in the United States.

MODERN VICES HIT BY MONTAG POWER

Modern vices were vigorously attacked by Evangelist Montag Power, known as the "gospel gatling gun," in a lecture at the South Side Civic league tent Washington and Fair streets, Friday night. Evangelist Power spoke on the text, Galatians 6 and 7. He attributed much of modern crime to parents, saying, "Many parents seem to have pulled off the bridle and turned their kids loose in the devil's pasture."

He will deliver a sermon at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night on "The Prodigal Daughter," stressing the single standard of morals. These sermons are part of an anti-vice campaign being waged by the South Side Civic league.
